Restricted Keying – Security and Peace of Mind

Duplications of the keys to your business without your consent provides an easy way to breach security. Without a restricted keying system, keys can be easily duplicated, providing access to your business – it's valuables and it's records.

Lockwood Generation Six is a legally protected restricted keying system, designed for businesses that require control over access to keys.

Restricted keying provides legal protection against unauthorised manufacture and duplication of keys. A restricted keying system gives you the control to issue keys with the security of knowing that additional keys can not be produced without written authorisation.

Legal Key Control

Lockwood Generation Six key and barrel profiles are legally protected by Design Registration to 2019, preventing unauthorised manufacture.

Lockwood strictly controls the distribution of these legally protected components, which are sold only to Lockwood approved locksmiths, who must meet strict business and security requirements prior to being appointed.

Each Lockwood Generation Six keying system is registered and signature control applies to all orders. Additional keys for your system will not be supplied without your written authorisation.

Generation Six can form the basis of your master keying system, allowing you to restrict access to those people who need access – further enhancing your security.
