EXTREME WINTER COLD DRIVES UP ENERGY USE

Winter often brings higher utility bills. When temperatures are low, electricity use increases due to higher heating needs. This is especially true during extended periods of extreme cold like Farmington has experienced this winter.

The larger the difference in temperature inside your house versus outside, the more energy you will use to heat your home. As a result, Farmington residents had higher than average electric bills for January and February.

Wholesale energy costs also rose during the winter storm, contributing to higher bills.

One way to manage seasonal spikes is through Budget Billing, which provides a consistent monthly payment based on your average usage. To sign up, visit the Farmington City Light & Water office or call 573-756-2620.

If you need help paying your utility bill, you may qualify for energy assistance through East Missouri Action Agency. To apply, call 573-431-5191 or go to eastmoaa.org.
