As the nation's longest-running community music school, Third Street has been transforming lives through the arts for over 128 years. In 1894, Third Street was founded by Emilie Wagner, an arts education pioneer who believed music played a critical role in both the development of a child and the advancement of a community. She made music education the cornerstone of a settlement house that welcomed immigrants to NYC and provided families with housing support, food, and medical care alongside arts enrichment. Today, Third Street is committed to leveraging arts education to empower youth to reach their fullest potential and unite the diverse communities of NYC. Third Street serves 6,000+ students annually, enriching their lives and communities.
