Lighting can make all the difference when it comes to décor and the fixtures that designers love now are uniquely shaped to make a room come alive.

“Sculptural lighting serves as both illumination and art, bringing character and visual interest to a space while still being functional,” says Candace Pereira, co-owner of Chloe Winston Lighting Design in Norwalk. “It sets the tone for a home’s design. We love the impact of a bold sconce in a powder room, or the dramatic statement an oversized chandelier brings to a foyer. It’s not just about lighting a space; it’s about elevating it.”
