30th Sunday in Ordinary Time – YRA 2026

As you know, Jesus is the second person of the Holy Trinity, so that means He reveals the mind of God to us whenever He is teaching. For example, He revealed the mind of God to us in today's Gospel passage when He was asked (Matt 22:36), "Which commandment in the law is the greatest." He said (Matt 22:37-39), "You shall love the Lord, your God, with all your heart, with all your soul, and with all your mind. This is the greatest and the first commandment. The second is like it: You shall love your neighbor as yourself."

God is love (1John 4:8,16), and since we are created in His image and likeness (Gen 1:27), our lives are supposed to be an image of love. Thus, it makes sense that the two greatest commandments are to love God and neighbor. In essence, Jesus is reminding us of who we are, and what we should be doing. We are created to love God and to love others.

When we love God, that helps us to love our neighbor. Putting God first will help a married person become a better spouse, and that will positively affect their marriage, their spouse, and their children. Putting God first will help a young person to love their parents better, and to love their siblings better. Putting God first will help us to be more patient, kind, and merciful towards all those whom God allows to come into our life.

The Missionaries of Charity, the order that St. Therese of Calcutta founded, attend Mass every morning, and then spend an hour with the Blessed Sacrament before going about their work of helping the poorest of the poor. That allows them to bring God's love to those who most desperately need to receive it: those who feel alone, abandoned, and forgotten. Their love for God helps them to love the poorest of the poor because they see their work with the poorest of the poor as an act of love given to Jesus.

Putting God first not only means going to church every weekend, it also means having regular prayer time every day. Life is hard enough as it is, so to go through life without spending time with God every day, means that we are going to have more difficulty handling the stress, the disappointments, the difficulties, and the imperfect people in our life. Each of our days should begin with prayer so that prayer is the foundation of every day. That prayer should include time speaking with God. Speak with Him in your mind as if He were sitting next to you. Tell Him what is going on in your life, both good and bad, and then ask Him to walk with you and to be with you. Then pray a decade of the rosary or an entire rosary. You should also be praying additional short prayers and/or devotions at other times during the day, spend some time reading the bible, and should end the day with some prayers that includes an examination of conscience. In addition, I encourage you to come to the church one other time during the week to pray.

Yes, it is easier for those who are retired to find time to pray than it is for parents who have three children under the age of six. However, if you have three children under the age of six, you need prayer. It might mean a few minutes here, and a few minutes there. That helps a lot. At least 15 minutes of prayer each day would be ideal. However, when you have three children under the age of six, you might not be able to find a block of 15 minutes in your day. Your best prayer time might be while you're holding a crying child. While holding that crying child you can say a quick prayer like this: "Come Lord Jesus. Come Holy Spirit. Help me. Comfort me, as I try to comfort this child. Help me to be a good parent. Blessed Virgin Mary, pray for me." A short prayer like that invites God into that moment with a fussy child. God wants to be invited into those moments. In addition, when you don't know what to do, invite God into that moment. You can pray something like this: "Lord God, I don't know what to do. Please help. Come Lord Jesus Christ. Come Holy Spirit. Help me. Blessed Virgin Mary, pray for me."

We spend time with those we love. Prayer is mainly about spending time with God, and we need to do that daily. When we pray, we are telling God that we need His loving presence in our life so that we can give that love to others, and face all the difficulties we encounter in life. Spending time with God in prayer shows our love for Him, and it also helps us to love our neighbor.

The second greatest commandment isn't don't kill, it isn't don't steal, and it isn't don't commit adultery. The second greatest commandment is to love our neighbor. Someone can go through life and never kill, never steal, and never commit adultery, but still not have love in their heart.

Love includes avoiding sin, but it is much more than that. Yes, it is an act of love to do our best to reduce the sins in our life so that we do not negatively impact those who come in contact with us. Yes, it is an act of love to try to eliminate lust and selfishness in our life, so that we love people rather than use them. Yes, do that, but do more.

Avoiding sin is not enough. God wants us to love. God not only wants us to avoid all sin; He also wants us to do good. He wants us to love our neighbor by doing good for them. One of the best definitions of love is this: Love desires the good for the other. That means not only avoiding doing things that will hurt them physically and emotionally, but it also means that we need to be doing good things for them.

We are inspired by true acts of love. We are inspired by true sacrificial love. We are inspired by love that truly desires the good of the other. It is easy to love when things are going well. However, love is truly inspiring when it is sacrificial in very difficult circumstances. Let me brag on my mom.

On February 5, 2017 my dad died of ALS, or Lou Gehrig's Disease. The first symptom he noticed was tingling in his fingertips three years prior. He thought it was a pinched nerve in his shoulder. As it got worse, he could not do buttons or zippers, so guess who did that for him, his wife, my mom. As it got even worse, my mom had to help him get dressed in the morning. Keep in mind, when this began my dad was 84 and my mom was 82. After helping my dad get dressed in the morning, they both would lay down and rest for half an hour before breakfast because getting dressed wore my dad out, and helping my dad get dressed wore my mom out.

Nine days before my dad died, he was admitted to the VA hospital in Prescott, so my mom stayed with me at the rectory at St. Germaine in Prescott Valley. A few days later, she told me that it was nice to be able to take a shower every day because while taking care of my dad she was either too busy or too tired to shower more than twice a week. Love desires the good for the other, no matter the sacrifice.

Many of you have taken care of an elderly parent, or taken care of a spouse in poor health. That's love, and that kind of love is inspiring. When life gets hard in a marriage based on sacrificial love, they keep on loving and sacrificing. There's no quit in spouses who have that kind of sacrificial love.

The movie and television industry frustrates me because they rarely show love like that in movies or on television. In addition, I think many of the movie and television stars have confused love with lust because we so frequently hear about them quitting their marriages, and filing for divorce. So many people look to movies and television for what love is all about, and then they become unhappy in life because they are following a recipe for failure in love. You would think that with all the breakups and divorces in the movie and television industry that it would be obvious that they are an example of what not to do in order to succeed in love and marriage. We won't find good examples of love in the movies or on television. The good examples of love and marriage are often hidden in the homes of married couples who know that love desires the good for the other.

Yes, some of the greatest acts of love are hidden. They take place in homes of retired couples who day after day help each other get through the aches, pains, and difficulties that have become a regular part of their life. They take place in homes with young families as parents sacrifice sleep, and their own needs in order to take care of their children. They take place in the hospices run by the Missionaries of Charity as they lovingly take care of the dying that they find on the streets of Calcutta. That's love. When the going gets tough, those with love in their heart keep on loving.

Some of the greatest acts of love are often done in the most difficult of circumstances. And so, look at the crucifix. In the midst of that tremendous pain and suffering Jesus said (Luke 23:34), "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do." In the midst of His pain and suffering, Jesus is thinking about the souls of those who had Him scourged and crucified. Love in the midst of very difficult circumstances is inspiring. Jesus chose to suffer this horribly painful death in order to save us from our sins. He chose that, to save us, because He loves us. Please, Lord, help us to love like that.

God commands us to love because that makes us like Him. The more we love, the more we become like God, for God is love (1John 4:8). May we find the time to spend with God in prayer, so that we can bring the fruit of that prayer, love, into the most difficult circumstances, and the day-to-day struggles and stresses we encounter. Because when we do that, we bring God and His love into a world that is starving for it.
