

THE GROUP PROJECT

I just want to clarify something before you give us our grade.

This was called a group project.

“Group” usually means more than one person.

There were four names on that title page, but in reality? There was one.

Me.

I made the slides. I did the research. I fixed the spelling mistakes. I even changed Tyler’s entire section because apparently Wikipedia counts as “primary research” now.

And then everyone shows up this morning saying, “We crushed it!”

We?

No.

I crushed it.

You watched me crush it while eating chips.

So if we get an A, wonderful. I’m happy for all of us.

But if we get anything below an A, I would just like the official record to show that I was never actually part of this group.

I was its unpaid employee.
