Thoughts on the Rosary by Pope Leo XIV

Greetings Everyone:

I found an interesting article by Pope Leo XIV.

Keeping you in my prayers.

Fr. Andy Sensenig OMI

The Rosary is the Weapon for survival in Life's Battles; Be Armed...

Life is not a playground; it is a battlefield. Every day, visible and invisible wars are fought over the human soul, wars of temptation, discouragement, fear, confusion, and despair. To walk through such a world unarmed is not bravery; it is foolishness. No soldier goes to war with bare hands, and no traveler crosses a desert without water. In the same way, no Christian should walk through life without a weapon of the spirit. The rosary is a disciplined strategy for survival. It is a chain that binds heaven to earth, and a quiet but terrible force against the powers that seek to weaken the soul. Each mystery is a window into the life of Christ, his humility, suffering, obedience, and victory. When we pray the rosary, we do not merely speak words; we walk with Jesus through His story. And what we contemplate, we eventually imitate. A mind that regularly meditates on Christ becomes resistant to lies. A heart that constantly listens to Mary's "Do whatever He tells you" becomes disciplined in obedience. The rosary forms the intellect by truth, the will by discipline, and the heart by love. That is why it is a weapon: not because it makes noise, but because it reshapes the one who holds it. See, the enemy does not fear your intelligence alone, nor your education, nor your social status. He fears a praying soul.

A person who prays the rosary consistently becomes difficult to manipulate because prayer clarifies vision. It teaches patience in suffering, courage in temptation, and hope in delay. The devil thrives where there is confusion and hurry; the rosary introduces order and reflection. It slows the storm inside the mind and exposes hidden traps of pride, lust, hatred, and despair. To be armed with the rosary is to carry light into dark corners of the heart. To neglect it is to leave doors unlocked in a city already under siege. Therefore, be warned with love: unarmed souls are easily harmed souls. When prayer dies, discipline dies. When discipline dies, character weakens. When character weakens, destiny becomes vulnerable. Many people fall not because they are wicked, but because they are careless. They walk into life's battles with entertainment instead of prayer, with complaints instead of contemplation, with noise instead of silence. But the rosary builds inner fortresses. It trains the mind to remember God, the tongue to bless rather than curse, and the heart to trust rather than panic. In a world of anxiety, it teaches peace. In a world of impurity, it teaches reverence. In a world of despair, it teaches victory.

So, do not wait until wounds force you to pray. Arm yourself before the arrows fly. Let the rosary become your daily exercise, your spiritual weapon, your school of wisdom. Pray it not as a burden, but as a shield; not as a routine, but as a relationship; not as magic, but as obedience.
