Things to Do with Your Time

BY ALICE CAMILLE

“Teach us to number our days aright, that we may gain wisdom of heart.” Beautiful if somewhat lacquered words from today’s

Psalm 90. What that means in plain English: Because we’re not going to live forever, let’s learn to live wisely and well. It’s a far cry from that other, more famous biblical phrase: “Eat, drink, and be merry, for tomorrow we die!” (Ecclesiastes 8:15; Isaiah 22:13). That was the song of soldiers reveling on the night before a battle—which many were not expected to survive. Both phrases are frank about our chances of getting out of here alive: nil. Or as my old theology professor used to put it: “The cosmic joke is, everyone who’s ever lived has died. So what makes you think you’ll beat the odds?”

The great biblical tradition agrees with science 100 percent: Our mortality is a given. We’ve got “seventy years or eighty, for those who are strong,” as Psalm 90 also tells us. Despite longevity studies that claim the next generation will see lots more people live to be 100, we’re still talking a mere century. A drop in the bucket of time, a century gets you from the Revolutionary War to the Civil War, from the buggy whip to the SUV, from the tuberculosis vaccine to chemotherapy. Advancement, to be sure, but on a rather modest scale as chronological history goes.

But let’s suppose you do get a century of living. What would you do with all that time? Would you use it any differently, achieve any more than you would with 80 years, or 20? We’ve all met 6-year-olds who have their act together more admirably than their parents. Age guarantees nothing. Time is in no way a measure of wisdom, only experience—or, more accurately, experiences.

And when we take time to reflect on those experiences, we may come up with the same assessment as Qoheleth:

What a lot of vanity is accumulated herein! An enormous percentage of life is spent in pursuit of money. We can’t live without it, yet its pursuit is often uncreative and leaves us unfulfilled and yearning. Money gets us stuff, some necessary, some useful, but much of which is burdensome, disappointing, and pointless. According to the foregone ending, we die and leave it all to someone else. No wonder Qoheleth was unhappy.

Jesus tells a story about a man who made a simple plan for the future: Eat, drink, and be merry! The fellow conveniently forgot the other half of the saying, so it never occurred to him that death was near. Jesus warns us that the only way to “gain wisdom of heart” is to be rich in what matters to God. Time to clean house, inside and out.

CATHOLIC Q&A

QUESTION

Is the Catholic Mass really celebrated the same throughout the whole world?

ANSWER

One of the truisms of the Catholic Faith is that "wherever you go in the world, the Mass is the same." In fact, the answer to this question is both "yes" and "no."

On the one hand, the essential elements of the Roman Rite are the same. The structure of the Mass as it is presented in the Roman Missal is consistent and this is one of the beauties of belonging to a liturgical tradition.

On the other hand, however, there are elements of celebrations that can vary depending on the country or even local region you might be in. For example, in certain parts of the world, certain feasts and solemnities are celebrated on different days (even here in the United States the Solemnity of the Ascension of the Lord can be celebrated on Thursday of the Sixth Week of Easter or it may take the place of the Seventh Sunday of Easter, depending on what diocese you are in). Whether it is the use of certain liturgical colors, local celebrations of regional saints, special seasonal blessings of crops or produce, or the use of dance and processions all demonstrate a sort of organic variety that can exist even within our established liturgical tradition. While we always respect what is essential to the rite, such local variations and traditions are very much in keeping with the vision of liturgical renewal and adaption envisioned by the Second Vatican Council's Constitution on the Sacred Liturgy (nos. 37-40).

Coin donations go to Mission San Diego Religious Education. Please support the SAC's effort to reach out to help our brothers and sisters in the community.
