God of Possibilities

BY ALICE CAMILLE

Saint Paul offers a wonderful prism through which to consider the Trinity: the grace of Jesus, the love of God, and the fellowship of the Holy Spirit. To begin at the natural top of this triangle, many scripture texts support the revelation of divine love. God is memorably defined by this central attribute in 1 John 4:16. When God originally introduces divinity to humanity in the story of Moses, God claims only “I AM”: pure existence. But John, mystically viewing eternity through the lens of Christology, goes further. I AM LOVE, he declares in God’s name.

It’s easy to see how he gets from one to the other. If Jesus and his Father are one, and God so loves the world as to surrender the Divine Son, then the pure existence of God is surely perfect love. Who or what else could make such a sacrifice? Although God doesn’t claim to be “love” in today’s story from the Book of Exodus, the Lord does announce the Divine Nature as mercy, grace, kindness, and fidelity—not inconsistent qualities but an aggregate of love’s facets. In fact, Moses, knowing full well that he travels with a wicked band of stiff-necked people, only dares to invite God to join their company because he understands that a Lord who pardons sin is a God of love.

We move next to the traditional third point of the triangle: the fellowship of the Spirit. If “God’s in his heaven” and Jesus is the Word made flesh who came to Earth, where does that leave the Spirit? A roving force of possibility, we might say. Jesus speaks of the Advocate as one that is sent (John 14:26) and says also that the Spirit comes and goes and blows where it wills (John 3:8). It makes sense not merely to speak of the movement of the Spirit but to perceive the Spirit as divine power in motion. The Spirit’s origin is in God but is sent by the Father in the name of the Son, according to Jesus. To share in the Spirit’s “fellowship” is to participate in this moveable feast of holy Presence.

Finally we come to the grace of Jesus. Paul begins his Trinity here, because it’s only through the Incarnation of the Son that we know about his loving Father and companioning Spirit. Grace, however, is one of those religious words we all use and rarely define. We know we shouldn’t leave home without it, but we’re not always sure what it is. In Hebrew it means “favor,” as to be in one’s (especially God’s) “good graces.” In the New Testament, the epitome of grace is expressed in John 3:16. The God who rescues us by whatever means necessary emphatically reveals divine favor in Christ Jesus. May such grace, love, and fellowship be with us always!

A REFLECTION OF GOD AS A TRINITY OF PERSONS

BY LISA MERSEREAU

In her excellent theological book, God for Us: The Trinity and Christian Life, Catherine Mowry LaCugna made this statement, “The God who does not need nor care for the creature, or who is immune to our suffering, does not exist.” LaCugna was able to make that statement because she knew that God as Trinity is relationship, communion, and love.

It is, and has been, easy for us to get bogged down in Catholic doctrine defining Trinity: one God in three divine persons. We want that definition to be further defined, to make sense to us. Ultimately, we are told “it’s a mystery, so just accept it and move on.” There truly is not one adequate way to describe the three divine persons being one God. In way of explanation, people have tried using the example of different “modes” of God, which of course separates God into categories. Rather than continuing to get bogged down, our thinking requires us to imagine the fullness of God in a way which we already know and live.

God’s three divine persons share love, unity, peace, and joy in relationship. How do we know this? God has revealed God’s self as Trinity throughout the Bible and in the liturgical actions of the Church. Think about all the references in the Bible referring to us being “in Christ,” or when Jesus teaches us in the Gospel of John that he and the Father are one and we are invited to be one with God through Jesus. You are invited to be in relationship with God. You are not distant from God. You are not a stranger to God. To reiterate, “The God who does not need nor care for the creature, or who is immune to our suffering, does not exist.” The fullness of God (Father, Son, and Spirit) works together so that we can experience love forever in eternity. We know the story. God the Father sent his Son, Jesus, so that he could teach us and when Jesus returned home, the Father and Son sent the Spirit to live in us, give us the words to pray, and strengthen us so that we can know how to live in relationship with God and others. Right there is why it matters what we believe. Believing in God as revealed in the Bible (as Trinity) allows us to know God authentically.
