READINGS FOR THE WEEK

Power, Power, Who's Got the Power?

BY ALICE CAMILLE

The media is full of it. Power, that is, demonstrated in images of clenched fists, men with guns, the natural world exploding, politicians open-mouthed with rhetoric, dollar signs gleaming, and the bragging rights of corporations. There's more power to be viewed in ads for the shiniest car, the sexiest lips, and the new pharmaceutical that'll change your life. If power's a subject that doesn't interest you, turn off the TV, power down the computer, throw away the papers, and chase the rest of the family out of the house. Even then, you're left with your interior dialogue. You don't think that's about power?

Who has the power makes all the difference daily: Is it you? The boss? Your spouse or kids or parents? Is it all the infernal people in this traffic jam ahead of you? The police or city hall? Wall Street or Washington? Is it the weather? God or the devil? Is it your bad habits or your greatest passions? Are you in charge of what happens next?

Ancient Israel believed that all power and authority resides in God, and they believed it the same way we do: mostly with lip service. There's an old Arab saying: Trust in God, but tie your camel. God has the power, but don't trust him too far. Because Israel professed that God had the power, it was shocking when the ruler of Persia ended up being the one to unlock the gates of Babylonian captivity. Pagan Cyrus on God's payroll?

The surprises don't end there. When Jesus is asked if it's lawful for Jews to pay taxes to hated Caesar and Rome, he doesn't say no. By "lawful," of course, is meant Mosaic law; Roman law demanded it. Tribute rendered to Caesar, like that paid to the Temple, seemed to imply allegiance or worse, a sacrificial offering to the god Caesar pretended to be. How could Jesus defend such a practice?

He doesn't. Jesus remains entirely neutral on the subject of Roman political control of Israel. It's the burning issue of his day, and he never directly addresses it. The disciples nag him for seats of authority in the coming kingdom right up to the night before he died, and it's one of the first questions on their lips after the Resurrection: So, when are you going to restore the kingdom of Israel? Jesus lives in an occupied country, is condemned and executed by a foreign power, and yet the closest he comes to addressing the matter is an almost friendly chat with Pilate on the nature of power during his trial. For those who exercise real authority, over life and death, in this world and the next, what happens to the spare change doesn't amount to much.

Those attending are asked to purchase a workbook at bit.ly/4ADpSHB or a downloadable pdf at bit.ly/46MFgnk. To register, contact: Lissa Hutcheson, DMin, lissahutcheson@outlook.com or call (619) 804-8950.

CATHOLIC Q&A

QUESTION

Why don't Catholics add the “For yours is the Kingdom ...” prayer at the end of the Our Father like Protestants do? Where did it come from?

ANSWER:

The conclusion of the Lord's Prayer that you refer to is called a doxology, which is a prayer of glory and praise. This particular doxology we do use in the Mass. After the Our Father, the priest prays the prayer that begins, “Deliver us, Lord, we pray, from every evil...” and the people respond with the doxology. The doxology is not found in the Bible, but it is very ancient. It was first found in The Didache, also called “The Teaching of the Twelve Apostles,” which dates probably from about the year AD 90. It was a letter of instruction to early converts to Christianity. Protestantism dates only to the sixteenth century, so the doxology is actually a Catholic prayer. Some scholars and the catechism (#2760) indicate that the doxology was connected to the celebration of the Eucharist and was not used apart from it.

Remember, both the Lord's Prayer and the Eucharist were part of the “mysteries of faith,” things taught only to believers. Ironically, a remnant of a prayer used during the celebration of the Eucharist has come to be used widely by many Christian churches that do not celebrate the Eucharist! Truth is indeed stranger than fiction!
