Love is All

BY ALICE CAMILLE

Life is complicated, but religion doesn't have to be. If you can't recite the Ten Commandments, list the nine Choirs of Angels, explain the reason we have Octaves, name the seven Capital Sins—or the six Precepts of the Church, five books of the Pentateuch, four gospel Evangelists, three major prophets, what was made on the second day of Creation, or know why there's a partridge in the doggone pear tree at Christmastime, it's Okay! The salvation of your immortal soul doesn't depend on the acquisition of a lot of information.

What it all comes down to, according to Jesus, is quite simple: Love God, and love one another. If we do that, the rest of the details take care of themselves.

That isn't to diss the catechetical ministry, upon which some of us, including me, have made our bread and butter. Education is helpful in every aspect of life, and religious education enriches us for the tasks of our lives by enlarging our understanding. Learning feeds the heart and soul as well as the mind, which in turn equips us for the task of loving. It's all good.

But nobody flunks Christianity 101 by not being able to list all 20 mysteries of the Rosary on short notice. (I'm usually stuck on at least two myself, and I wrote a book about them.) Religion isn't a memory game, and the final exam, if you remember Matthew 25, doesn't include data retrieval of any kind (with regrets to your Confirmation teacher). By the time we get to Judgment Day we discover we've already handed in our work. And the work, as it happens, exclusively involves how much and in how many ways we've shared our love.

Jesus wasn't tossing a game-changer at the scholar who questioned him. The law of God was always about love, if we paid attention to the passage from Exodus—or just about any passage of the law and prophets. These “new” commandments merely summarize and abbreviate all that's gone before, Jesus says. In John's gospel, of course, Jesus further distills the teaching to one command: Love one another. He's not eliminating the obligation to love God but acknowledging that the way God wants to be loved is through demonstrations of care for each other.

We live on a small planet, as we're beginning to appreciate in this century as never before. There's no room for hate on this little world of ours, nor indifference to the plight of anyone, no matter how different or far away. How much less, then, can we afford to turn our hearts from the people closest to us: spouses, family members, fellow parishioners, neighbors, coworkers, fellow citizens, and resident noncitizens. Love is what we're here for. Let's get to work.

CATHOLIC Q&AQUESTION

Is Halloween a pagan holiday or a Catholic one?

ANSWER:

The short answer: nowadays, a little bit of both. But it wasn't always that way. Halloween and All Saints' Day are closely connected. In the 800s, the Catholic Church began celebrating All Saints' Day. It was originally called All Hallow's Day or Hallowmas. The celebration began early on All Hallow's Eve. But if Halloween is really about the saints in all their victorious glory, where do we get haunted houses, costumes, and pranks?

All Saints' Day became associated with the other deceased rather quickly. November 2nd is All Souls Day, where we pray for the souls in purgatory. Throughout the European world, especially with the Celtic and Germanic peoples, the dead were honored in the autumn months. The Celtic pagan celebration of Samhain had its own folk rituals and occurred around the same time as these Catholic feast days.

Within the last few hundred years, this included dressing in disguise and going door to door, asking for food in exchange for a rhyme or poem. Some people masqueraded as "dark" spirits and pulled pranks on others. Today's celebration of Halloween tends to take on these later practices, rather than the original meaning of celebrating the saints. But remember ... this feast was Catholic first!
