SPOTLIGHT: CATALYTIC CONVERTER

Diagnosing Catalytic Converter Issues: Key Symptoms and Causes

Catalytic converters play a crucial role in reducing vehicle emissions, but they can fail due to underlying problems.

Recognizing symptoms and understanding causes can help you diagnose issues accurately and provide lasting repairs.

Common Symptoms

- Check Engine Light codes P0420/P0430 (OBD-II vehicles)
- Rotten egg smell indicating sulfur processing issues
- Reduced power and fuel efficiency
- Hard starts or rough running
- Failed emissions tests and visible converter discoloration

Common Causes

- Overheating from misfires, faulty ignition, or bad O2 sensors causing catalyst damage
- Contamination from oil or coolant leaks coating the catalyst
- Physical damage from road debris or corrosion

Diagnosing Effectively

Use infrared thermometers to check exhaust temperatures before and after the converter, and engine vacuum tests on older vehicles to detect restrictions.

Always address engine or sensor problems before replacing the converter to avoid repeat failures.

Quality Replacement Matters

Choosing a quality catalytic converter that fits precisely and built to match OE design can help ensure your repair lasts. NAPA has the converters and exhaust parts you need to reduce comebacks and keep your customers satisfied.

Why R-1234yf?

R-1234yf systems have similar charging size and operating pressure as systems for R-134a

R-1234yf has ultra low environmental impact

About 50% of vehicles on the road have R-1234yf systems

45-50% of the 134M+ VIO in the U.S. are R-1234yf vehicles

Percentage of US fleet by refrigerant (%)

● R134a ● R1234yf

▶ NAPA has a comprehensive product portfolio for R-1234yf

Advantages of 25lb and UV

Buying 25lb gas cylinders instead of 10lb ones saves $80-$100 for every 50lb of gas.

UV products are more cost-efficient than manual dye injection and avoid extra labor and materials - critical because R-1234yf RRR machines don't include an injection port

EV REPLACEMENT PARTS

Toyota Prius Maintenance Schedule

The #1 Hybrid Vehicle on the Road in the United States

10,000 Miles or 12 Months

You'll want to get the following work done:

- Check the installation of the driver's floor mat
- Inspect and adjust all fluid levels
- Cabin air filter
- Inspect the wiper blades
- Rotate the tires (Rearward cross)
- Visually inspect brake linings/drums and brake pads/discs
- Replace engine oil & filter

15,000 Miles or 18 Months

The 15,000-mile check will follow the same format as the 10,000-mile one. However, you'll also want to get the following inspected:

- Ball joints and dust covers
- Brake lines and hoses
- Drive shaft boots
- Engine/inverter coolant
- Exhaust pipes and mountings
- Radiator, condenser, and/or intercooler
- Steering gear
- Steering linkage and boots

30,000 Miles or 36 Months

Has your Prius reached 30,000 miles or has it been 36 months? Follow the 10,000-mile check. You'll want to get the same items inspected from the 15,000-mile work, as well. However, you'll also want to add the following to that list:

- Automatic transmission for signs of leakage
- Fuel lines and connections, fuel tank band, and fuel tank vapor vent system hoses
- Fuel tank cap gasket

100,000 Miles/120 Months & 120,000 Miles/144 Months

The maintenance will continue pretty much the same way until you've hit 100,000 miles or 10 years. At this point, the only new work will be to replace the engine/inverter coolant. If your Prius reaches 120,000 miles or 12 years, then you've done a great job at keeping up with regular maintenance. The only new work you'll need is to replace the spark plugs.
