The Upper Room Family Resource Center in Derry is happy to announce that it will begin a partnership with See Science Center in Manchester, to open access to the See Science Center for families who are engaged in programs with The Upper Room. During a NH Center for Non-Profit event held at See Science Center, Executive Directors Shana Hawrylchak and Brenda Guggisberg were discussing the incredible programs and activities that happen at See Science Center. The Upper Room Family Resource Center has offered family programs at the center to bring families and children to places that build creativity, connection and childhood curiosity. During the discussion the 2 decided that creating a mutual partnership would benefit how families access such amazing programs as See Science Center and developed a partnership that will offer The Upper Room times to meet families at the center for fun and discovery.

“Planning is underway and a schedule will be available over the summer for the coming year. We are so happy to have See Science Center open this opportunity for families who are connected to The Upper Room, and look forward to making many fun family moments here” Shares Brenda Guggisberg from The Upper Room. The Upper Room offers any parent and family programs and is including this into the family engagement activities that the agency promotes to build family connections, community and wonder. Registration will open over the summer. To learn more about See Science Center, visit <https://see-sciencecenter.org/plan-your-visit/>
