Introduction

ABOUT ABWP

The Association of Black Women Physicians is a non-profit 501(c)(3) organization established in 1982 that is committed to community health literacy and public health advocacy. We provide an ongoing forum to support the success of African-American women in medicine, science, and public health. Because Black women make up only 2.8% of the physician workforce, ABWP creates critical opportunities for social networking and mentorship to students and trainees to increase diversity in the medical profession, specifically by supporting the pipeline of future Black women physicians. Annually, ABWP distributes scholarships to deserving medical students.

Scholarship Overview

Mentoring Future Black Women Physicians

Supporting the work of ABWP helps our organization with closing health disparity gaps through community education, professional support of women physicians of color, and mentoring future doctors through our Sister-to-Sister program.

This mentorship program helps contribute to inspiring female medical students from medically underserved backgrounds by helping them navigate through the challenging process of becoming a physician and ABWP also provides the needed scholarships to help defray the high cost of medical education. Through our annual Charity & Scholarship Benefit Gala, ABWP awards several future women physicians with our Rebecca Lee Crumpler, MD Scholarship. We cannot do the work without the generous support of our community partners and sponsors.

Black Physician Stats

$320B

"Inequities in the US health system cost approximately $320 billion today and could eclipse $1 trillion in annual spending by 2040 if left unaddressed."

-Deloitte

2.8%

In 1970, less than 1% of US physicians were Black women, increasing insignificantly to 2.8% of all physicians in 2021.

5.2%

In 2023, 62.4% of physicians were men, 37.6% were women, 56% were non-Hispanic White and 5.2% were Black.

"We all need to recognize that the dearth of Black physicians is sapping the strength of our whole society and that inaction in the face of need is a hallmark of how structural racism often manifests today."

-Dr. Camara P. Jones

Making A Difference

Funds raised through sponsorships, donations, and silent auctions support initiatives aimed at enhancing our capacity to radically improve the health of our communities by providing mentorship, leadership development, advocacy training, standardized testing, medical school and residency application support, and individualized support for our Black women physicians and aspiring physicians, as they fulfill their life's calling to care for the most vulnerable of our community and effect positive change in our health care system.

JESSICA EKEYA

Rebecca Lee Crumpler Scholarship | Vena Ricketts/ABWP Community Service
Anthem Blue Cross Named Scholarship

Jessica is originally from Vancouver, WA. She graduated from Harvard College in 2019 with a major in biology and minors in Spanish and American Sign Language. After graduation, Jessica conducted a year-long traveling fellowship in Colombia. She then returned to the United States to work as a research assistant at Gallaudet University.

Jessica is currently a first-year medical student at the University of Southern California's Keck School of Medicine. As a member of the school's Primary Care Program, her goal is to become a primary care clinician and community health advocate. As she is fluent in both ASL and Spanish, she is committed to working with Deaf patients and Spanish-speaking patients who do not feel comfortable communicating in English. Jessica plans to focus on these and other underserved communities in her future career. In her free time, she enjoys reading, traveling, and dancing.

JANINE CADET

Rebecca Lee Crumpler Scholarship | Vena Ricketts/ABWP Community Service

Currently, Janine is in her fourth year of medical school and applying into Emergency Medicine. She hopes to balance a career as a practicing physician and public health professional that can improve outcomes of many communities in the future

MARIANMU OSUMAH

Rebecca Lee Crumpler Scholarship | Vena Ricketts/ABWP Community Service

Growing up, Marianmu did not always have the resources to help her excel in school, so she had to transition into a self-sufficient learner because that is what was required. In middle school, Marianmu willingly sacrificed her lunch periods to ask her teacher clarifying questions about the course material. Since she was young, she has been adamant about understanding challenging subjects. Her zeal for knowledge has enabled her to progress through school and grow confident in her abilities. Though Marianmu was frequently the only Black student in her classes, making her feel she needed to prove she was there for good reason, she was able to graduate from the University of California, Los Angeles with a dual degree in Neuroscience and African-American studies. Her training in Neuroscience encouraged her to seek information and use logic, while African American studies provided her a keen understanding of the multidimensionality of human existence, as well as helped her build a strong foundation in critical thinking. A combination of qualities that have allowed her to understand the scientific basis of medical research and remain inclusive while practicing medicine.

As an adult in the workplace, she learned to speak up for herself, though cognizant that many people would be put off by a vocal, Black woman, imagining her to be “angry.” Marianmu’s experiences were intimidating and sometimes hurtful, but pushed her to develop courage and become a stronger person and communicator. As a Black woman, she has had her competence and worthiness questioned. As a student of critical Black theory, she learned about the ways Black, female, or low-income patients are overlooked by doctors. Now as a member of a historically underrepresented group within medicine, Marianmu is working to gracefully combat historical trends and be amongst a generation of doctors who can finally remedy this disparity. As COVID-19 claims a disproportionate number of lives of color, awareness of health inequity is more crucial than ever.

SCOTTI SMITH

Beverly James Scholarship Recipient

Scotti is originally from Detroit, Michigan, where she attended Wayne State University, obtaining a Bachelor of Science in the Biological Sciences in 2019. While at Wayne State, she participated in many extracurricular activities, volunteering opportunities, and research that sparked her interest in medicine and primary/preventative care. During her gap year from 2019-2020, she worked as an ABA technician for children with Autism at Gateway Pediatric Therapy and as a clinical team member at Michigan Spine and Brain Surgeons, both located in Metro Detroit. Currently, she is in her second year at the Keck School of Medicine of USC. She is a member of the Primary Care Program, where she has participated in community service projects within the Los Angeles area. She has also been actively mentoring high school and undergraduate students interested in the healthcare field. Recently, she has joined the Board of the Lactation Training Initiative at USC, whose goal is to bring workshop and curriculum updates to the medical students at Keck to improve their knowledge and understanding of lactation and breastfeeding. Her current career goals include participation in efforts to further reduce the health disparities experienced by the underserved communities in our society. She is currently interested in pursuing a career in family medicine with a focus on women's health.
