

"With ease and elegance, Supreet engages audiences deeply while breaking down the complexities of technology and business – and the intersection of both. These nuggets are presented with great humor; they are simple, easily understood insights that speak to today's global innovation landscape. The best part? Supreet engages audiences, challenging them to think. As a result they become active participants in the panels or talks that he presents."

SUMMARY

Technology is moving at warp speed and radically reengineering our world. The changes are daunting, revolutionary, and bring unprecedented complexity. Few people truly understand the seismic changes ahead or how to navigate this new world.

Global innovation presents a tremendous opportunity, especially as different regions build their ecosystems. However, their potential can only be realized if innovators possess a deep understanding of technology, global ecosystems, and a nuanced understanding of business innovation.

The question: What is the best way to approach innovation and build technologies that truly change the world?
