

SPECIES

OLBAN

"My first encounter with an Olban was on a distant world near the edge of the Hegemony. His name was Varyn, a warrior of great renown, but it was his passion for the arts that truly captivated me. He spoke little of his victories in battle, instead weaving tales of his homeworld's beauty and culture with an intensity that belied his imposing frame. In Varyn, I discovered a depth of character and a love for his people that transcended his role as a guardian of the Hegemony, a testament to the duality of the Olban Spirit."

— Wallace Flint, Human Explorer

Summary

The Olbans are the oldest allies of the Cyreans and were the first to join the Hegemony during its formation. Their raw physicality is tempered by their unwavering loyalty to the ruling Cyreans, resulting in a highly refined warrior culture in which they excel instinctively. Due to this inherent loyalty, the Olbans are the only species from which the Honor Guard is chosen.

Oathbound Artisans

Though the Cyreans may be the Hegemony's scholars and philosophers, the Olbans are its heart, infusing the realm with their passion for the arts and letters. Their inherent respect for words and the power of oaths served as the foundation upon which the Cyreans built the rule of law, forging an unprecedented bond between the two species in their early days of unity.

Olban Traits

Darkvision: Due to their natural adaptatoin to dark environments, Olbans have superior vision in dark and dim conditions.

Hunter's Instincts: Olbans have an inherent aptitude survival and perception.

Feral Agility: Olbans can move extremely fast in short bursts.

Claws: Olbans possess razor-sharp claws that can be used as a melee weapon.