Les and Leslie. A husband-and-wife team who not only share the same name, but the same passion for helping others build healthy relationships. Les is a professor of psychology at Northwest University and they are founders of the Center for Healthy Relationships on the campus of Olivet University.

Married in 1984, the Parrotts bring real-life examples to their speaking platform. Their professional training – Leslie as a marriage and family therapist, and Les as a clinical psychologist – ensures a presentation that is grounded, insightful and cutting-edge.

Les and Leslie are strong Christians, and their ministry is faith-based at its core. They are considered one of the preeminent marriage ministries in the United States. They are also behind the marriage initiative coming to the state of Idaho. Highly articulate and organized on the topic of marriage, they have authored around 20 books dedicated to helping couples build Christ-centered relationships.
