Carriers of the Light: Our Vocation in Christ

Two weeks ago, on the Feast of the Epiphany, we reflected on the image of phosphors. Phosphors are substances that absorb light energy and then continue to glow even after the light source is removed. Their electrons are excited by the light and retain that energy, radiating it outward—especially in darkness. The very word phosphor comes from the Greek meaning “light-bearer” or “light-carrier.” This image beautifully captures the Christian vocation.

Jesus Christ is the Light of the World. We are not the Light—but we are called to receive His light, to be bathed in it, transformed by it, and then to carry that light into the darkness of the world. The more deeply we dwell in His presence, the more brightly we can reflect Him. What we receive from Christ is never meant to be hoarded; it is meant to be given away.

This theme resounds throughout today’s Scriptures. Isaiah speaks to a people overshadowed by fear and defeat—especially those in the regions of Zebulun and Naphtali—promising that a great light will scatter their gloom. The Psalm proclaims with confidence: “The Lord is my light and my salvation.” Saint Paul warns the Corinthians not to divide themselves according to human instruments, reminding them that all who preach and minister do so on behalf of God alone, who calls His people into the light of communion. And in the Gospel, Matthew shows us that Jesus Himself is the fulfillment of Isaiah’s prophecy—the Light who rises in Galilee and shines upon those dwelling in darkness.

This moment marks the beginning of Jesus’ public ministry. After His baptism, after forty days in the desert, after facing temptation, Jesus emerges preaching a single, foundational message:

“Repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.” This call to metanoia—a change of heart and life—is the doorway into the Kingdom. From there flows everything else: the calling of disciples, the proclamation of the Good News, and the healing of the broken.

As we reflect on these readings, the theme of vocation comes sharply into focus. Vocation comes from the Latin vocatio—a calling. Jesus has a calling from His Abba-Father: to announce the Kingdom, to serve, to save, and ultimately to offer Himself on the Cross. The fishermen—Peter, Andrew, James, and John—are called to leave their nets and follow Him, becoming fishers of people, drawing others into the Reign of God through word and action.

For a long time, the word vocation was narrowly applied only to priests and religious. But the Church has recovered the ancient, apostolic understanding: by virtue of Baptism, every Christian has a vocation. Each of us shares in the ministry of Christ as priest, prophet, and king. Ministry means service—and it belongs to all.

Some are called to ordained or vowed life, dedicating themselves entirely to ecclesial ministry. But every Christian is called to full-time discipleship. Whether our daily work is in a church, a classroom, an office, a hospital, or a home, we are secular ministers—people who live in the world while serving within it. Our primary fields of mission are our families, workplaces, schools, and communities. It is there that we evangelize, sanctify, proclaim God’s love, and lead by humble service.

True service does not mean becoming a doormat, nor does it mean coercing others into belief. It means creating an atmosphere where others can encounter the Light—where hearts are drawn, not forced; invited, not threatened. We serve so that others may experience the Reign of Heaven breaking into their lives. At the heart of all this stands a profound truth: the Word of God is not merely spoken—it is a Person. “The Word became flesh and dwelt among us.” And He dwelt among us in order to die for us.

Every word Jesus speaks, every miracle He performs, every call He issues leads ultimately to Calvary. The Cross is the earthly fulfillment of His mission and the center of ours. Saint Paul reminds us that eloquence without the Cross is empty, even dangerous. The true depth of the Word of God is found only in the sacrifice of Christ, made present above all in the Eucharist, where the Word made Flesh continues to offer Himself so that we may enter into communion with the Father through the Son in the Holy Spirit. By embracing the Cross—through daily repentance, humble service, and faithful love—we enter the very life of God. How astonishing and humbling it is that God invites us into this mission. Yet He does. Our vocation is both a gift and a challenge: to live as reflections of Christ, carriers of His Light, glowing with the energy we receive from Him.

Personal Reflection / Action

When I hear the word vocation, what do I think of? • Do I recognize that I am called to share in the ministry of Jesus, the Light of the World? • How can I better reflect Christ’s light through concrete acts of service? • Who is most in need of my ministry today? This week?

May we praise the Light who shines in the darkness—and may that Light shine through us.

Jesus Tells us to Repent

Today we hear about Jesus beginning His mission of preaching and healing the sick. The very first thing He tells the people is that they should repent from their sins.

Why do we need to repent of our sins? Why don't we just stop thinking about the bad things we did and start trying to be good?

Well, pretend your soul is like a garden. When you sin, it's like making a big hole in the ground. You can't grow flowers in a hole, and someone might trip on it and make the hole bigger. That's what can happen with sins too- little sins can cause bigger ones.

When you are sorry for your sins and go to confession it's like filling in the holes and planting flowers where they used to be. Keep your soul like a good garden and make sure you don't have any holes in it!
