

Mindelo — a welcoming city, yet a cruel stepmother. A cradle of sounds, shipwrecks, and unfinished gestures. It embraces with one hand, disorients with the other. Capable of dazzling with its untamed light and, in the same gesture, pushing you to the edge of vertigo. Here, beauty coexists with fever, memory dances with delirium — and everything throbs under a sun that never repents. Laughter is resistance. Chaos has a proper name. This exhibition is a plunge into that paradox: an intimate and unsettled portrait of a city that welcomes without asking, yet consumes without warning. A scream in paint, a confession in raw colors. A place where faith has lost its compass, goodbyes are never said, and madness is just another way of being. No God to guide, no farewell to release — only the raw pulse of a city that burns slowly. Sacred in its disorder. Alive in its ruin. An altar of excess where the soul lets down its hair... and art finds shelter. It is in its madness that its spell lies. Mindelo, stage and mirror.
