About: Siggy Brunnacker & Mark Andrews

Siggy spent his early years at American Express Travel in the northeast, giving him unique insights that led him to head up Hyatt Hotel's Florida region for sales and marketing. I had a dream of owning a property near a beach one day. Around 2014, Siggy visited Puerto Vallarta, among other hot spots in Spain, France, and South America, shopping for a property to quench my thirst for change. My other requirements were gay-friendly cities, beaches, and a more extended tourist season. Since it was relatively easy to purchase a property in Mexico compared to other countries, he chose a single-family home with the bones for a Bed & Breakfast. He named it Palcico 199 (now Villa Lola) on Pulpito, just steps from my next big idea, Zona Z. I became aware of a large apartment building for sale just steps away on Pino Suarez, so in early 2019, I sold Palcico 199 for a more prominent hotel. It was a property with a colorful past and lots of patina, needing extensive renovations of its 11 apartments. The goal was to keep the old town's charm while modernizing the accommodations to become a Lifestyle Boutique

Hotel. During this time, my husband Mark moved south, asking only for a small room to practice chiropractic care somewhere in the hotel. We opened the hotel in November of 2019, and, you guessed it – COVID bamboozled for 2 years, like everyone else. However, the good news is Mark and I survived and the Hotel including our Staff.
