

Hillery Group is an indigenous family-owned business founded by a local Bowen couple in 1976 who proved that a business could survive and thrive in a small coastal town in Queensland. Today, the business is owned and led by the next generation, Chief Executive Officer Luke Hillery and Director of Extractive Industry Liam Hillery. From the beginning, the vision of the business was endurance and being able to provide sustainable work to the community. Our mission is to continue this legacy into the next generation and beyond, shaping the business with the knowledge of the industry and market trends for this region well into the future.

Hillery Group owns and operates seven quarries in the Bowen, Collinsville, and Whitsundays regions, as well as leases a sand reserve in the Don River. We provide quarry products, landscaping supplies and plant hire services to mining and civil construction companies throughout the Whitsunday region.

Investing in the future of Hillery Group and the Community

At Hillery Group, we believe in building more than just roads and infrastructure — we’re building a future. Our Apprenticeships & Traineeships Program is a vital part of this, helping to grow a skilled, local workforce while creating real opportunities for young people in our region.

We’re committed to keeping our people local by offering meaningful career pathways and hands-on experience in the civil construction, quarrying, and heavy industries.

Our program includes:

- Work placements
- School-based traineeships
- Full-time apprenticeships and traineeships

Learning Pathways:

We support multiple learning pathways, including:

- TAFE qualifications
- Registered Training Organisations (RTOs) delivering training onsite
- Online learning
- And most importantly — on-the-job experience

“We make sure our trainees and apprentices have time within the workday to focus on their studies, because we understand the value of balancing learning with real-world skills. This program isn’t just an investment in our business — it’s an investment in our people and the future of the communities we live and work in.”

Congratulations to Georgia on being named a regional finalist in the 2025 Queensland Training Awards!

This prestigious recognition highlights her dedication and excellence in vocational education and training (VET) within Queensland.

The Queensland Training Awards celebrate outstanding achievements across various categories, including apprentices, trainees, students, teachers, training providers, and employers. Georgia’s achievement serves as an inspiration to others pursuing vocational pathways and underscores the importance of dedication and hard work in achieving professional excellence.

Our Commitment to Lifelong Learning

At Hillery Group, we see learning as a lifelong journey — not just a phase. Whether you're starting out in a traineeship or stepping into leadership, we're committed to supporting continuous development at every stage of your career. From accredited training and industry tickets to mentoring, upskilling, and professional growth, we actively create opportunities for our people to learn, adapt, and thrive. Because when our team grows, so does our business — and so does our impact on the community.
