OUR MISSION STATEMENT

To honor the Lord as Servants of Christ and Stewards of the mysteries of God by spreading his message of Love, Hope, Faith and Respect. In trusting his message, our diverse community will always remain united and be guided by the Holy Spirit, to encourage and support the development of the Sacramental Life and by being a community open to others that are coming in search of Christ's love and teachings.

GOSPEL REFLECTION

The Gospel we have just heard marks a turning point in the life of Jesus and a turning point in the lives of those who encounter Him. Jesus does not begin His ministry in Jerusalem, the religious and political center. He does not start among the powerful or the educated elite. Instead, He goes to Galilee of the Gentiles, a region considered mixed, marginal, even suspect by the religious authorities.

This is deeply revealing. God does not wait for ideal conditions or perfect people. He goes to the margins. He enters places that seem spiritually unimportant. He begins His work in ordinary settings, among ordinary people. This should be consoling for us. Many people think, "God will work in my life when I get things together, when I become better, when my faith is stronger." But the Gospel shows us the opposite. God begins right where we are, not where we wish we were.

Jesus' first public words in Matthew's Gospel are not complicated. They are not theological explanations or moral lectures. They are direct and urgent: "Repent, for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." To repent does not simply mean to feel bad about sin. The word means to change direction, to turn around, to begin seeing life differently. Jesus is saying: "Do not continue walking the same path. Something new has begun."

And why repent? Not because God is angry, but because the Kingdom is near. God is close. God is acting. God is entering human history in a new way. Repentance, then, is not about fear; it is about readiness. If the Kingdom is at hand, we must decide whether we want to remain as we are or step into what God is offering.

As Jesus walks by the Sea of Galilee, He sees two fishermen: Simon Peter and Andrew. Then He sees James and John. These men are not scholars. They are not religious leaders. They are not even seeking Jesus. They are working—casting nets, mending nets, doing what they have done every day of their lives.

And yet Jesus looks at them and says: "Come after me, and I will make you fishers of men." Notice something crucial: Jesus does not ask what they know, what they have achieved, or what qualifications they bring. He does not say, "If you improve yourself, then follow me." He simply calls them.

This reminds us that vocation begins with grace, not merit. God does not choose us because we are worthy; He makes us worthy by choosing us. The Gospel emphasizes the immediacy of their response: "At once they left their nets and followed him." "Immediately they left their boat and their father and followed him."

This is one of the most challenging lines in the Gospel. The nets, the boat, and even family represent security, identity, and stability. Fishing was not a hobby; it was survival. To leave their nets was to leave what defined them.

The Gospel does not romanticize this moment. Following Jesus always involves loss before gain, surrender before clarity, trust before understanding.

For us, the nets may look different: attachment to comfort and routine, fear of change, control over our plans, habits that keep us from deeper faith
