

What is the UK IRDG ?

The UK Industrial Reproductive Toxicology Discussion Group comprises industrial manufacturing companies, contract organizations and consultants that are involved in reproductive toxicology with facilities in the UK. Other individuals with an interest in reproductive toxicology are welcome to attend group meetings. The Group is not a profit-making organisation

What is our purpose ?

To provide a forum for informal discussion of the scientific and technical aspects of reproductive toxicology testing, including overall test strategies and to provide a source of expertise to critique the development of new tests and techniques and to ensure their successful validation. The members of the Group also co-ordinate collaborative work that is needed to support these objectives.

When do we meet ?

The Group normally meets biannually in the Spring and Autumn with meetings being sponsored by the member companies. Joint meetings are also held in collaboration with other scientific groups

What do we do ?

The Group represents the general interests of the UK industrial reproductive laboratories in discussions with other scientific groups, manufacturers, suppliers and regulatory authorities.

The Group regularly organizes technical and theoretical workshops to increase the expertise of its members and to identify and publicize the scientific position of the group.

How can we be contacted ?

Contact the UK IRDG on our web site at www.irdg.co.uk

The group is keen to form links with other industrial toxicology groups or relevant societies in order to arrange joint scientific meetings or discussion groups.

We look forward to meeting you
