Effective March 1, 2026

Aside from the emotional aspects, selecting a casket can be a difficult task for a family because there are so many options available. Caskets can be divided into two main categories, metal and wood, and are described in detail below.

Wooden Caskets - Many families choose a wooden casket because of their natural characteristics and neutral interior options. Each wooden casket is unique to the tree that it came from. They also come in many different wood species including mahogany, walnut, cherry, maple, pecan, oak, pine and poplar. Wooden caskets can also be made from a high quality veneer that cannot be distinguished from solid wood, except that they are less expensive.

Metal Caskets - Those looking for color and definition often look more towards metal caskets. They come in a variety of different colors and variations. The interior fabric often comes in a muted color matching the exterior paint. These are offered in many different metals including bronze, copper, stainless steel, and carbon steel.

Life Symbols
Compatible

Caskets with this designator are able to accept Life Symbols art either in the form of a medallion or statuary art. These may be kept by the family as a special keepsake. There are a large selection available at the funeral home.

Cremation
Only

Caskets with this designator are only to be used for cremation services. This is due to the width of a casket exceeding the width of a standard outer burial container.
