Reflection for the 29th Sunday in Ordinary Time, Year A

Today's Gospel invites us to consider two simple but demanding questions: Who is truly in charge, and who deserves our gratitude for every gift we receive?

In the Gospel, the Pharisees and Herodians approach Jesus with a carefully designed trap. Although these groups were usually opponents, they unite because Jesus threatens their power. After flattering him, they ask whether it is lawful to pay the census tax to Caesar. A "yes" could make Jesus appear to support Roman oppression; a "no" could make him seem rebellious.

Jesus refuses to accept their false choice. Looking at the coin stamped with Caesar's image, he answers, "Repay to Caesar what belongs to Caesar and to God what belongs to God." The coin may bear Caesar's image, but every human person bears the image and likeness of God.

With this response, Jesus moves the conversation beyond politics to discipleship. His words ask us not only who we are, but whose we are. Through Baptism, we belong to Christ and become temples of the Holy Spirit. Therefore, giving "to God what belongs to God" means offering God our whole lives; our time, abilities, possessions, relationships, choices, and love.

This truth also shapes the way we see others. Every person bears God's image and must be treated with dignity, even when we disagree. Our faith is not merely something to defend in an argument; it is something to reveal through patient speech, courageous witness, generous service, and trust in the Holy Spirit.

God is at work in ways we may not always notice. He is opening paths, providing grace, and carrying us through difficulties. Gratitude begins when we pause long enough to recognize these gifts. Discipleship begins when gratitude becomes a response.

Our scripture readings today challenge us to recognize that our life is measured not by wealth, status, pleasure, or personal ambition, but by whether we are living in holiness, following God's will, and loving others. Christian life is about habitually directing our actions and thoughts towards the good of others.

Each morning this week, choose one gift from God for which you are grateful. Then choose one concrete way to return that gift to God; maybe you can encourage someone who is struggling, serve without being asked, give generously, or speak about your faith with humility. At the end of the week, ask: Did my choices show that I belong to God?

God bless you,
Deacon Anthony Cioe
