

He's Got
You
Covered!

In the intense, triple digit climate conditions of the Katy area, roofs take a real beating. Even a little bit of moisture from a small leak can damage the structural support of your home—your most important investment—and lead to bigger problems. That's why you don't need a fly-by-night, part-time “roofing guy.” You need an expert, someone who knows what to look for and is 100% honest. Meet Henry Viesca, owner of ProRoofs Restoration.

No one knows more about roofs than Henry. He's been studying, appraising, testing and walking on roofs for more than ten years now. "In 2008, right after Hurricane Ike, my brother recruited me to work in the roofing business," says Henry. "I quickly realized you need someone who cares to inspect your roof for problems. If your roof was improperly installed or recently subjected to gale-force winds or hail, you would be shocked to see how quickly conditions start deteriorating."

"Here's the thing to remember: The only way to tell what's going on with your roof is to physically get on your roof and walk it," continues Henry. "Many home inspectors are afraid to do that. They 'inspect' using drones and binoculars. That's just not going to cut it. Unless you're up there, you can't tell if a shingle is loose or damaged. Every member of our team has been trained and educated to diagnose, repair, and replace your home's roof. We actually take photos and write detailed reports, including an estimate of how many years your roof has left. A lot of prospective homeowners ask us to inspect their roofs before they buy."

If your roof is damaged and you're not happy with your insurance quote, call Henry! "We are happy to get up on the roof with your insurance company for a reinspection. Sometimes that's all it takes to get you every dollar that's coming to you. As a licensed insurance adjuster, I can look at your paperwork and make sure it's on the up-and-up. Insurance companies are usually pretty conscientious about getting adjusters out to your house after a storm, but things get missed. That's why it's good to have someone on your side fighting for you."

"We get a ton of referral business. Call for your free evaluation and estimate and we'll be right out. You may even get a chance to meet Buddy. My wife Karla and I have five girls who begged us for a dog. They wanted another girl, of course, but we needed at least one other male figure in the house. Now Buddy rides along with me to most of my jobs!"

After Hurricane Harvey and at the request of many clients, Henry parlayed his quest for perfection into additional areas of home improvement, including floors, siding, gutters, fences, windows, doors, patios, painting inside and out, and so much more.
