Fireworks

“...it will be celebrated by succeeding generations as the great anniversary festival... solemnized with pomp and parade... bonfires and illumination (fireworks)...” wrote John Adams on July 3, 1776 after the Continental Congress proclaimed the American Colonies independent of England. A life can be celebrated with pomp, parade and fireworks. Cremated remains can be incorporated into fireworks and then scattered and “burst into air” with a beautiful fireworks display. This can also be done with pet cremated remains.
