

JACQUELINE BROADBRIDGE

Occupational Therapist

PROFILE

Jacqueline holds a career-long commitment to improvement of the health and occupational wellbeing of individuals and communities through her work within the public sector, private tertiary education sector and voluntary industry participation.

In her current work as a Lecturer, she has pursued research and academic activities, seeking high quality evidence and resources to support practice in undergraduate students as well as practitioners within the occupational therapy sector.

Previous work within the public sector has seen Jacqueline produce a large body of work; most particularly assessments of capability for individuals and development of national stakeholder contracts to deliver medicolegal quality allied health professional assessments.
