Designing Dreams

Side by side with clients, the team at J'Adore Luxury Homes crafts residential spaces from the imagination

Whether a statement marble island grounding an elegant kitchen, a seamless layout that connects dining to living space, or an outdoor space that allows room to roam, characteristics of a perfect home are frequent daydream destinations. However, aspects such as the complete floor plan, preferable materials, and overall budget may be harder to picture. Jason Gullo, founder of J'Adore Luxury Homes, along with his team, helps clients nail down the details.

"Everyone has a style. It is about finding that style and bringing it to life," he says. "We meet with clients to learn what they want included in the home—whether it's vaulted ceilings, hardwood floors, or custom built-ins—and incorporate that into their floor plan."

J'Adore Luxury Homes encompasses everything from design to permitting, construction, interior design, and final installation. Its services are both seamless and collaborative. Clients can be as hands-on as they'd like, choosing everything from curtain rods to tile, or take a back seat on everything but major decisions.

Gullo and his team crafted a layout that maximized space and worth for a custom lakefront property in Hendersonville. The 2,500-square-foot house was transformed into 5,000 square feet of beautiful living space with 14-foot walls and a black-and-white color palette. Soaring 26-foot ceilings incorporate a touch of drama while floor-to-ceiling windows and shiplap accents pull the waterfront in.

With a penchant for visualization and love of craftsmanship, Gullo can't imagine himself anywhere else. Above all, he looks forward to the stories his homes will tell. "I enjoy transforming spaces," he says. "It's important for me that the homes we build will still be lived in and enjoyed 50 years from now."
