President's Message

Sandy Dubrowskij

Greetings Republican Women and Conservative Friends,

Have you noticed very many signs in your neighborhood? I put out at least 10 Yes on 39 signs in my neighborhood. The annoying thing is that only three have been left in place. Why would a person not allow a sign to be left out? Maybe the city is cracking down. I don't know and does it really matter? In a short period of time, I know many of the cars passed those signs. Are people paying attention? I know you are paying attention. I ask myself, "Did I talk to enough people? Did I pass out enough candidate's cards and voting guides?" I feel I have done my civic duty. As November 3 approaches all I can do is continue to encourage people to vote. You all voted, right? Voting centers open on October 24, so don't hesitate.

President Trump continues to fight communist insurrection judges in every part of our nation. In one week, his administration asked the Supreme Court to allow voter citizenship verification. The Trump DOJ secured deportation of ISIS terrorists in the first ever use of the Alien Terrorist Removal Court. This is one of my favorites: the Trump administration drafted a policy to let married stay at home parents collect child care aid instead of paying strangers to raise their children.

President Trump is working hard for the American People. There is so much behind the scenes that we don't see but I trust the plan.

Contrast that with what our California state government is doing and there is a gigantic contrast. One of the laws that horrific Governor Newsom signed is AB2017 which puts TWO Islamic holidays on the calendar. I am not interested in having Sharia law anywhere in the great state of California. We are fighting an ideology that is not compatible with our great Constitution. And the awful Attorney General Bonta took authority that our friend Sheriff Chad Bianco had to investigate the ballot count and stepped all over that investigation shutting it down.

God help us in California! I am hopeful that things can and will turn around. We must take back our country now!

As George Washington said, "We should be very cautious of violating the right of conscience in others, ever considering that God alone is the judge of the hearts of men and to Him only they are answerable."

Best Regards and see you on the other side of Election Day.

INVOCATION—Donna Bennett

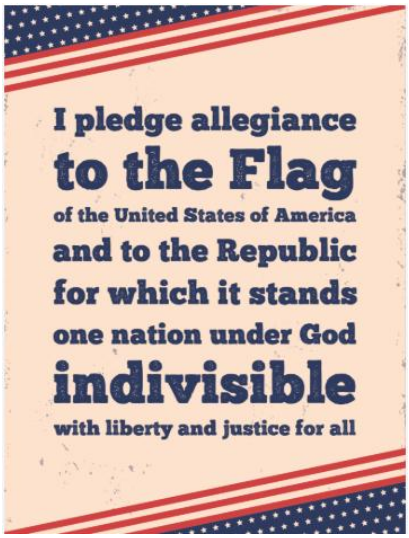

The coming election could be the most consequential of our time. There is so much anxiety and depression in this troubled world. We must put our faith in God, that no matter the outcome, God is still there for everyone who believes. Having faith gives us comfort no matter what the outcome. However, we still need to do everything we can to get the right candidates elected. I pray that the Greater Long Beach Republican Women are successful in the candidates we supported.

God Bless the United States of America.

BEAUTIFUL LONG BEACH:

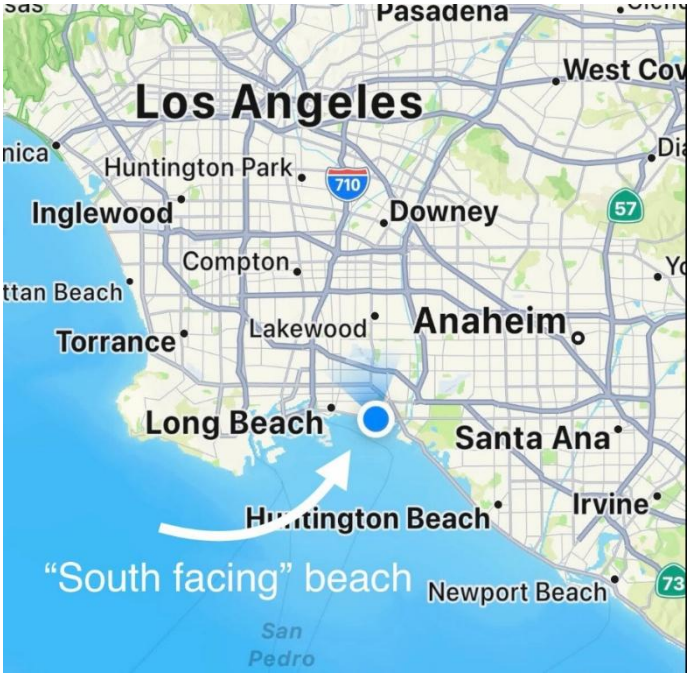

The THUMS Islands are four man-made islands off Long Beach's shoreline. Built in 1965, they were created to extract oil from the offshore portion of the Wilmington Oil Field. Their landscaping and decorative structures help hide drilling equipment and reduce noise and look beautiful out in the harbor.

Long Beach is a world-famous destination. Even with its many challenges (mostly due to progressive policies), it is a beautiful city.

Yet, it is an expensive region. According to the Council for Community and Economic Research, the Los Angeles-Long Beach area ranks ninth in the United States to live in (published in Los Angeles Times on September 13, 2026). Orange County, which borders Long Beach, ranks fifth. Obviously, the Times is pushing an inflation narrative to suppress Republican support. Once the midterms are over, expect that chronicle to change, especially if "Commiecrats" are successful in taking one or both Houses of Congress. But anyone who thinks good times will roll if Democrats take power should be reminded of Joe Biden's four AutoPen years. Better yet, look to Cuba.

If you know people (family, friends or neighbors) who might be sitting on the fence about the midterms, remind them that the high prices are designed to hurt Republicans. Be sure to share that high prices are temporary, but communism isn't. VOTE RED – the country we save will be our own!

INTERESTING ABOUT LONG BEACH (posted on Facebook by Lisa R.)

In most parts of California, the Pacific Ocean is directly "west" of the coast. But not in Long Beach. As you head down the California coast, the land curves at 90 degrees for a few miles, before straightening out again, heading towards San Diego.

And that is where Long Beach is located.

It has a "south-facing" beach, very different than almost anywhere else in the state. Water heading north will basically travel alongside the coast. But in Long Beach, the water makes a direct hit to the beach.

That is why the waves in Long Beach were once spectacular. But, to protect the Long Beach and Los Angeles ports, and to prevent coastal erosion - a 2.2 mile breakwater was built in the 1940s. It was meant to absorb the energy of waves, tides, and storm surges. As a result, we always had small waves - they just sort of lap at the shore.

We also have wide expanses of sand - the water was never close to the street at all - once on the sand, it was at least a 500-foot walk before you were even near the water. Over the years there have been many groups who want to demolish the breakwater, to restore natural water circulation.

But … they are never going to take out the breakwater. However, there is a "break" in the breakwater, located roughly at 62nd Place on the peninsula. This has allowed storm swells to sneak in at that small opening. As a teenager, that was our beach of choice. The other parts of the beach were downright boring. We just accepted our little itty bitty waves, along with our wide expanses of sand.

It is literally a perfect storm of El Niño, king tides, and heavy storms.
