Boulder COUNTY BAR ASSOCIATION

LEARNING ABOUT YOUR BAR

COA Opinion Database Page 7

The BCBA has been working on a project this summer to learn more about our membership. Last month we focused on practice areas. This month we will break down member categories and firm sizes.

Member Categories:

- Senior attorneys (8+ years of practice) - 630
- Intermediate (4-7 years of practice) - 84
- Junior attorneys (1-3 years of practice) - 82
- Government attorneys - 74
- Retired - 40
- Paralegal - 89
- Student - 290

Firm type and size:

- Large firm (16+ attorneys) - 222
- Medium firm (6-15 attorneys) - 130
- Small firm (2-5 attorneys) - 127
- Solo - 186
- Government - 51
- In House Counsel - 42
- Judicial - 30
- Nonprofit - 14
- Education - 10

It has been so interesting to break down our membership as we try to find more ways to meet such a diverse group's varying needs. Member engagement can be hard in such a busy time. We are always looking for ways to innovate and find new ways to make your BCBA membership a meaningful part of your career. Please let us know if you have any ideas that you feel would make the bar better! We love hearing from you. Emails can be sent to laura@boulder-bar.org or call us at 303-440-4758.

DOUG STEVENS

An Ode to Running

As anyone who has lived in Boulder County could tell you, we are very into endurance sports. Many of us have friends who have completed Ironman Triathlons or have summited Everest or routinely run Ultramarathons, scale Fourteeners, and compete in long bike races. It is likely that some of you reading have done so yourself. And consistent with this passion, is many of our residents' passion for running. We host one of the nation's most popular road races every year, the annual Memorial Day Bolder Boulder 10 kilometer race, which is as much a community celebration as it is a competition, as more than 50,000 people finish in the University of Colorado's Folsom Field to kick off the Summer. In addition, there is the Boulderthon during which approximately 17,000 people run through Boulder in distances ranging from 5K through the Marathon. And then there are countless other races throughout the year.

In addition to these races, in the City of Boulder alone, we have more than 100 miles of paved and dirt running trails. On any given morning in town, thousands of people ranging from beginners to current and former Olympians and kids to octogenarians populate the trails taking in our breathtaking scenery and dry air. There are countless running groups throughout the County, also attracting people of all levels and ages.

My personal running journey began when I was five years old when I would complete in One Mile Fun Runs every week during the Summer of 1981 with my dad on the boardwalk in Long Beach, New York. Throughout my childhood, I competed in countless road races ranging from one mile through a half marathon—and most typically 5K—during which I also stalked the other kids my age to try to ensure I would place in my age group. I competed in cross country and track during high school, included enduring the bitter cold outdoor training sessions on Long Island for our Winter Track team. The Winter Track season also brought the unspeakable boredom and repetition of competing in a 2-mile race on an indoor track that is 11 laps to a mile.

Truth be told, while I loved the camaraderie and quality time with my dad and friends that running offered me at that time, I never truly loved running. It was something I was relatively good at, so I did it. I found other sports like basketball and tennis far more exciting. So, it is not surprising that after I graduated from high school in the early-90s, I took nearly 20 years off from running, Naturally, as I became less active throughout law school and during my early and busy years as a parent and attorney, I started to put on weight and became "out of shape."

However, shortly after I moved to Boulder in 2009, I slowly got hooked back into running. It was primarily the lure of the Bolder Boulder race along with seeing scores of people my age looking fit and athletic running through my neighborhood each morning with smiles on their faces. I started to think: "I used to do that. I wonder if I still can"?

The journey back to running was far more arduous than I had anticipated. My first run out, I could not get around the block. I tried running ten minutes at a slow pace on a treadmill and it was a struggle. But slowly, I started to gain fitness. After a year of working my way back, I was able to complete a 5k race in town; albeit, with a time approximately double what I was running back in high school. A year after that, I finally ran the Bolder Boulder, again with a time I undoubtedly would have been embarrassed with back in my youth. Nonetheless, I was naïve enough to believe even at that point that I would eventually return to the speed I was running in high school.

As I got into better shape and time went by, I soon learned two truths: (1) I was never going to return to the speeds I was running 20 years earlier; and (2) that it really did not matter because I loved running way more than I ever had when I was a kid.

I soon discovered that running not only provided me with an excellent outlet for gaining fitness and achieving a healthy lifestyle, but also a great way to experience nature and our unique community. Through my running club (which I joined very reluctantly and with significant prodding by friends due to fear of being surrounded by intimidating "Boulder" runners), I have made some of my closest friends. And while I am undoubtedly one of the slowest runners in my group, others are always supporting my goals.

Over the last 15 years, I have now completed ten marathons from one coast to the other, more than 20 half marathons, more than a dozen Bolder Boulders, and more local 5k races throughout the country than I could count. And, often, I find those small 5k races with less than 100 people on the 4th of July in northern Michigan just as enjoyable as the iconic New York City Marathon.

Running also provides me with an amazing opportunity to see the world as there are few things I find more iconic than running through a historic, highly populated city such as Paris or London before it truly wakes up. The feeling that along with a few other runners and cyclists, I have this place to myself is an incredible one.

So, for those of you who are perhaps reluctant to try running or disliked it in your younger days, I urge you to give it another try. I doubt you'll regret it!

COLORADO'S UNPUBLISHED COA OPINION DATABASE

MATTHEW A. SIMONSEN, CIVIL LITIGATION SECTION CHAIR

By far, unpublished opinions of the Colorado Court of Appeals comprise the largest body of appellate caselaw in Colorado. Of the more than 1,700 opinions collectively announced by Colorado's appellate courts each year, more than eighty percent are unpublished court of appeals opinions. Until recently, those unreported opinions were effectively unavailable to practitioners and the general public.

In 2024, the Colorado Judicial Branch launched a free online database of opinions dating back to 1864, pursuant to the Justice Gregory Hobbs Public Access to Case Law Act (H.B. 22-1091). Although that legislation specifies that "any court of appeals opinion not designated for official publication . . . is not required to be published online," unpublished opinions were added to the database later in 2024 and have since become available on multiple paid legal research platforms, including Westlaw and LexisNexis. Now, apart from citation format, unpublished opinions are nearly indistinguishable from their officially published counterparts.

The dawn of an era where these opinions are "unpublished" in name only presents two questions: First, does the official publication designation still carry any significance? Second, how can practitioners use the largest body of Colorado appellate caselaw?

Under the Colorado Appellate Rules, official publication remains determinative of an opinion's precedential value. Rule 35(e) specifies that "[o]pinions designated for official publication must be followed as precedent by all lower court judges in the state of Colorado," whereas Rule 35(f), concerning unpublished opinions, lacks any similar command to lower courts. Though certain criteria must be satisfied, designation for official publication is never required or automatic for any court of appeals opinion, even if certiorari is later granted. Specifically, "[n]o court of appeals opinion shall be designated for official publication" without a determination by a "majority of all of the judges of the court of appeals" and "unless it satisfies one or more of the following standards":

> (1) the opinion establishes a new rule of law, or alters or modifies an existing rule, or applies an established rule to a novel fact situation;
>
> (2) the opinion involves a legal issue of continuing public interest;
>
> (3) the majority opinion, dissent, or special concurrence directs attention to the shortcomings of existing common law or inadequacies in statutes; or
>
> (4) the opinion resolves an apparent conflict of authority.

1. Official publication is typically reserved for around 200 opinions per year, comprised of every opinion of the Colorado Supreme Court and those designated for official publication by the Colorado Court of Appeals. See, e.g., Supreme Court Protocols, Colo. Judicial Branch, https://www.coloradojudicial.gov/supreme-court/supreme-court-protocols?topic=78&wrapped=true (supreme court "issued 70 majority opinions"); Court of Appeals Protocols, Colo. Judicial Branch, https://www.coloradojudicial.gov/topic/77/court-appeals-protocols?topic=77&wrapped=true ("Of the 1,639 opinions, 133 were published and 1,506 were unpublished.").

MATTHEW A. SIMONSEN, CIVIL LITIGATION SECTION CHAIR

While the Colorado Appellate Rules assign no explicit precedential value to unpublished court of appeals opinions, they also lack any prohibition against citing unpublished opinions as persuasive authority. In fact, the Colorado Court of Appeals has held that its unpublished opinions may (but need not) be considered as persuasive authority in Colorado's trial courts. (2) Federal courts sitting in diversity are likewise free to consider unpublished Colorado Court of Appeals opinions. And at the Colorado Supreme Court, which promulgates the Colorado Appellate Rules, not only are unpublished opinions fair game, but citation to a conflicting unpublished opinion can increase the odds of obtaining certiorari review. (3)

By contrast, in proceedings before the Colorado Court of Appeals, unpublished opinions remain off limits. As every other Colorado court increasingly looks to this abundant body of Colorado caselaw, the Colorado Court of Appeals is unwavering in its enforcement of the "Policy Concerning Citation of Opinions Not Selected for Official Publication" posted on its website, which allows only certain non-authoritative uses of its unpublished opinions (specifically, "to explain the case history, identify the law of the case, or assert the doctrines of issue preclusion or claim preclusion"). Apart from those uses, "citation of opinions not selected for publication" is prohibited "in proceedings before the Colorado Court of Appeals." (4)

Despite facilitating online access to its unpublished opinions and supporting their use as persuasive authority in other courts, the Colorado Court of Appeals continues to prohibit their use in its own proceedings. Until it breaks from that tradition, unpublished opinions will remain a paradox in Colorado—fair game everywhere but the court that authors them.

Matt Simonsen is an attorney at Grata Law and Policy LLC in Boulder. Matt's practice focuses on appeals and civil litigation, primarily in commercial, real estate, and plaintiffs' civil rights matters. Before entering private practice, he completed judicial clerkships at the Colorado Supreme Court and Colorado Court of Appeals. Matt can be reached at 303-535-3533 or matt@gratalegal.com.

2. Patterson v. James, 2018 COA 173, ¶ 40.

3. See C.A.R. 49(c) (certiorari review may be warranted where "a division of the court of appeals has rendered a decision in conflict with the decision of another division of said court").

4. Court of Appeals Policies, Colo. Judicial Branch, https://www.coloradojudicial.gov/court-appeals/court-appeals-policies?topic=77&wrapped=true; see, e.g., Douglas Cnty. v. State, 2026 COA 27, ¶ 16 n.3 (declining to consider unpublished opinion cited in appellate brief and admonishing counsel for "violat[ing] this court's established policy"); Pine View, LLC v. Bd. of Cnty. Comm'rs, No. 25CA0079, 2026 WL 1354421, at *5 (Colo. App. May 14, 2026) (unpublished) (expressly declining to "rely on" unpublished opinion cited below by parties and district court, notwithstanding "that our conclusion . . . is consistent with the division's opinion in that case"); see also Jesse Howard Witt, Colorado's Unpublished Opinion Database: A New Frontier of Legal Research, 55 Colo. Law. 30, 32 n.25 (Jan./Feb. 2026) (as of early 2026, relaxing this policy was a recent topic of discussion inside the court, "but no changes are currently planned").

LEGAL CLINIC VOLUNTEERS NEEDED

Did you know the BCBA sponsors a Free Virtual Legal Clinic for Boulder County? This started during the pandemic and was so successful we have continued it to help further our commitment to access to justice. To date, we have helped over 1700 community members!

We have a small group of incredibly dedicated volunteers who give 15-20 minutes of their time approximately once every few weeks. We would like to get that number to once a month, but we need more volunteers! Can you help with 20 minutes once a month in service to your community?

Please let us know that you are available to help once per month (or more!) along with your practice areas. We could not provide this service without all of our amazing volunteer attorneys! Please contact Bay for more information about attorney.participating as a volunteer
