MEET THE OWNERS

This village, located in the Deori block of Giridih District in Jharkhand, is about 50 kilometers from the district headquarters and is home to approximately 35 families from the Chamar, Ravidas, and Santhal communities. Most residents rely on daily wage labor, gathering firewood, farming, and animal husbandry for their livelihood. For years, the village has faced a severe water crisis due to its hilly and rocky terrain. The entire community depends on a single government-owned well, which often runs dry during the summer months. When this happens, families must travel long distances for water, nearby ponds dry up, and some villagers even take their cattle up to 10 kilometers into Bihar to find water while waiting for the monsoon rains. Because drilling borewells in this area requires depths of 250–300 feet, extreme poverty has made this impossible for the community. With no additional government water facilities, options were limited. After learning of the urgent need in Budhaadih, the Quenched team took action. With the support of Shambhu Kumar Sah and the cooperation of the villagers, a 280-foot borewell was successfully drilled. Today, women and girls who once spent hours carrying water from nearly 500 meters away now have clean water within their village. This has greatly reduced their daily burden and improved quality of life. The community is deeply grateful to the Quenched team for this life-changing support.

MEET THE PASTOR

Evangelist Shambhu Kumar Sah, along with his wife and three children, has been a key leader in advancing the Lord's work in this region. Recognizing the water crisis facing the community, he has faithfully devoted himself to helping ease their daily struggles. His continued efforts reflect a deep commitment to improving lives, strengthening the community, and investing in future generations. Despite many challenges, Shambhu Kumar Sah's steadfast dedication and perseverance continue to bring hope and positive change to this community.

THANK YOU FOR YOUR PARTNERSHIP!
