MEET THE USERS

My name is Tek Bahadur Magar, and I would like to share a testimony from Sahipur Village in Tikapur Municipality, Kailali District, in far-western Nepal. Our village has around 20 houses, mostly from the Magar community. Most families depend on agriculture, daily wage labor, and seasonal work in India. For many years, our greatest struggle was the lack of safe drinking water because there was no well in our village.

For a long time, access to water was extremely difficult. Every day, our biggest worry was water. We had to walk to a neighboring village to collect drinking water, carrying heavy containers on our shoulders. The well we depended on was very old, and many mornings we feared it would not provide water. We often waited in long lines for hours, and sometimes returned home with empty vessels.

This was especially difficult for women, children, and the elderly. Because water was so limited, bathing was rare, washing clothes was delayed, and keeping our homes clean was a constant struggle. There were even times we felt ashamed to invite guests because we could not offer enough water.

WELL REPORT

Depending on another village was also painful. At times, we heard harsh words while collecting water, and it hurt our dignity. Though we worked honestly for our living, we still felt helpless and forgotten. Our hope slowly weakened, and we prayed silently for God to open a way for us.

We were not financially able to install a well ourselves. But through the love and support of the church and Quenched, God made a way. A drinking water well was installed in our village, and it has become a great blessing.

Today, five families benefit directly from this well, and six to seven families and visitors benefit indirectly. We no longer need to walk far for water or depend on others. Clean water is now available near our homes, making it easier to drink, bathe, wash clothes, and maintain hygiene. Even people passing through our village can stop and drink water, which brings joy to our hearts.

We sincerely thank Quenched for this support.

THANK YOU FOR YOUR PARTNERSHIP!
