The earliest known name for the place where the Monongahela and Allegheny Rivers join to form the Ohio River is Day-a-o-geh. This Seneca name describes it as the place where the beautiful rivers meet or the low place where the beautiful rivers meet. It is a narrative account of the people and events that shaped western Pennsylvania from the earliest habitation to the arrival of the civilization of today. It covers a time frame from approximately 10,000 BC to 1800 AD. The story contains over 2,600 indexed names of the people and places that are part of that history. Donated by the author.
