“Promoting a Better Quality of Life for All Mankind”

The Athens Area Human Relations Council, Inc (AAHRC) is accepting nominations for the Community Service Award and the Rev. David H. Nunnally, Sr. Founder’s Award. Through these awards, the AAHRC seeks to honor individuals or organizations that have made outstanding contributions to human relations through volunteer work or by addressing various social issues such as diversity, social or political justice, poverty, sexism, religious freedom, prisoner’s rights, discrimination, prejudice, etc.

The AAHRC Community Service Award will be awarded to individuals in Northeast Georgia who have provided community leadership, support, and/or direction in the area of human relations.

The Rev. David H. Nunnally, Sr. Founder’s Award will be awarded to an individual or organization that has worked to improve human relations and made valuable contributions in the state of Georgia.

In evaluating award nominees, the AAHRC focuses on three fundamental elements:

- (1) the way in which an individual or organization demonstrates its commitment to human relations,
- (2) the way in which an individual or organization demonstrates leadership by example, and
- (3) the methods an individual or organization uses to improve human relations and/or build relationships with others.

Nominees will be considered for both awards.
