

Before I was leading workshops and guiding CEOs, I was interpreting ASL at rock concerts, creating a trivia game that sold worldwide, giving a TEDx talk, and managing multiple businesses.

My story begins in a bilingual household, where I was a CODA (Child of Deaf Adults) with American Sign Language as my first language. As you can imagine, my life was all about communication.

That lens shaped my life.

As I grew, it didn't take long for me to notice, the world often missed the beauty in being different. This led me to launch and scale businesses rooted in Deaf services—advocacy, interpreting, and creating spaces where people felt fully seen and heard.

But my real training came from decades of helping people communicate across differences.

That's what led me to create culturebuild: a business growth consulting company built to help founders, executives, and teams cultivate cultures that actually work, both from the inside and from the outside.

I'm an Enneagram 7, a high "i" on the DISC, and a lifelong optimist who believes joy and structure can live in the same room. If you need someone to bring positivity and no-nonsense energy, you've found her.
