

But the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into the exterior darkness

(adapted from St Alphonsus' sermon for the 3rd Sunday after Epiphany)

Today, Jesus intimates that many born outside the Church shall be saved while many born within her shall be cast into Hell where the gnawing worm of conscience shall reap eternal tears. Let us examine the three remorses of conscience which the damned Christian suffers in Hell: remorse from knowing what little was required of him to save his soul, remorse from recalling the trifles by which he lost his soul & remorse from knowing it's all his fault. (Numbering and cases, even divine pronouns, belong to the original.)

1. First: A damned soul once told St. Hubert of her two most cruel executioners in Hell: the thought of the little required of her in this life to secure her salvation & the thought of the trifles which she perused to eternal misery. Each reprobate will eternally lament: "If I abstained from such a gratification; if in certain circumstances I overcame human respect; if I avoided such an occasion of sin, such a companion, I should not now be damned; if I had frequented a pious sodality; if I had gone to confession every week; if in temptations I had recommended myself to God, I would not have relapsed into sin. Often, I proposed to do such things, but did not do them; I began to practice such but gave them up; and thus, I am lost."

6. Second: Esau, after eating the bowl of pottage which cost him his birthright, was tortured with grief & remorse for which he "roared out with a great cry." (Gn 27:34) How great shall the damned roar & howl when they consider, for a few poisonous & brief pleasures, they lost an everlasting happiness to gain an eternal misery!

9. Third: A certain queen, blinded by the ambition of being a sovereign, said one day: "If the Lord gives me a reign of forty years, I shall renounce Paradise." The unhappy queen reigned for forty years; but now, in another world, she can only grieve at her renunciation. How great must be her anguish at the thought of having lost heaven for the sake of a forty-year reign, full of troubles, crosses & fears! To the damned, the voluntary loss of Paradise is a greater loss than the very pains of Hell.

11. The damned shall see that God wished them to be saved, and he gave them the choice of eternal life or of eternal death: "Before man is life & death, that which he shall choose shall be given to him." (Eccles. 15:18) The damned shall know, if they wished, they could have obtained eternal happiness; it is by their choice they are damned. On Judgment Day, they shall see many of their companions among the elect; but, because they would not stop their path of sin, they have walked its end to Hell where they shall continually sob, "There is no peace for my bones because of my sins." (Ps 37:4) This last remorse produces an internal pain which enters the very bones of the damned and prevents them from ever enjoying a moments repose.

12. If, beloved brethren, you have hitherto been so foolish as to lose God for sinful pleasure, do not stay in your folly. Endeavour, now that you are able, to change. Perhaps, if you do not now resolve to amend your life, you shall be abandoned by God and be lost for ever. When the Devil tempts you, remember Hell, the land of misery. I say, remember Hell and have recourse to Jesus Christ & to most holy Mary, and they will deliver you from sin, which is the gate of Hell.
