Hot Legal News: Barrett v. United States (2026) Could Change Everything

Have you—or a loved one—been sentenced under both 18 U.S.C. § 924(c) and 18 U.S.C. § 924(j) for the same firearm-related conduct?

On January 14, 2026, the United States Supreme Court issued a major decision in Barrett v. United States holding that one act that violates both provisions may result in only one conviction—not two—when the charges are based on the same underlying conduct involving a firearm during a crime of violence resulting in death.

If this applies to your case, it could mean:

- ⚖️ One of the convictions may need to be vacated
- ⌚ Years—possibly decades—off your sentence
- 📄 New grounds to seek relief, including a § 2255 motion and other post-conviction options (case-dependent)

If you have both § 924(c) and § 924(j) convictions tied to the same incident, the time to review your case is now.

Who This Ruling May Help (Quick Checklist)

You may want an immediate review if your paperwork shows:

- A conviction for § 924(c) (use/carry/possess a firearm during a crime of violence or drug trafficking), and

- A conviction for § 924(j) (death caused through the use of a firearm during a § 924(c) violation), and
- Both counts are based on the same event / same firearm conduct

Even if you're unsure, we can help you identify what your judgment and indictment actually say.

New Legal Opportunity After Barrett

If your case includes both § 924(c) and § 924(j) for the same conduct, you may qualify for:

- ⚡ Sentence reduction potential
- 🗑️ Conviction vacatur (one count removed)
- ↻ Resentencing relief (often the next step after a vacatur)
