Happy New Year from West Virginia!

The past couple of weeks have been a whirlwind of traveling to churches and meeting new people with a heart for missions!

About four and a half weeks ago, I broke my foot during a run, so that has made travel a bit more from a trampoline accident, so we are camped out in West Virginia with some friends to heal up a bit before traveling overseas.

Having been a Japan missionary for the past two years, I wouldn't say things have happened exactly the way I envisioned when I first started out as a missionary.

challenging.

However, I am continuing to do seated upper-body workouts and making sure I keep myself healthy so I can heal and get back to using my feet as soon as possible!

As my sister and I prepare to leave for the Philippines on January 21st, please pray for our journey. Both of us have injuries we are healing up.

My sister has had injuries on and off with her upper body

There are things I would do differently and areas of my life where I'd like to see growth in as I continue on this path.

As I move forward with studying Japanese and praying into next steps, please pray with me for God to give me clear direction and open doors.

Whatever happens this year, I am believing for breakthroughs and God to do amazing things!
