Slippery September

September 2025

Psa 17:5 Hold up my goings in thy paths, that my footsteps slip not.

Dear Friends and Co-Laborers

September has been an interesting month to say the least! We are still here in West Virginia with the good people of Emmanuel Baptist Church and the work is progressing quickly. By God's grace we now have all the exterior walls up, with sheeting and house wrap, along with the second floor joists.

God has been good to us and blessed the efforts of his people! He has however made it challenging to do the work as it has rained almost nightly and showered during the day as well, creating some uniquely slippery surfaces to walk on. Around here if you walk anywhere it is either up a hill or down a hill, a flat area is hard to come by. So as you can imagine, wet muddy grounds makes for slip and slide effect, so much so we lost one of our workers to it as he slipped just right and broke his ankle in two places requiring surgery to repair it! Please pray for a speedy recovery for him as he is missed and already is desiring to return to the work. Praise the Lord for a servant's heart!

Challenges seem to be what this work is all about, or at least overcoming them. Learning to use what you have to the best of your ability is paramount when finances are tight, and equipment is old, but God is always good, and things just fall right into place even when you don't expect them too! Praise the Lord for his loving care!

Which brings me to his loving care for me as well. Just before we headed out for WV, I had to spend the night in the hospital for chest pain. I thought it was resolved, but I was wrong, after the first few weeks here I was continuing to have problems that made me a little concerned. So, during the month of September I had to return to NC for a heart doctors appointment, just to be sure. I'm glad I did though! As now I am scheduled for a heart catheter on the 9th of October. They believe I have a blockage and may need another stent!

By God's grace this won't slow us down long! As we still have plans on leaving for Tennessee shortly after and then onto Missouri for the FOA conference at Wilson Creek Baptist in mid October. So please pray all will go well and we will be able to keep our schedule and plans as so many already need our help.

Thank you for your continued support and prayer as we serve our God together!
