PROCESS:

The Office Administrator and the pastor of the venue associated with the deceased person should be notified about any death. The Office Administrator then sends out an email to all personnel who may have a responsibility in the service. The Office Administrator will reserve facilities and handle the bulletin, if requested. After the departments are made aware of the funeral, the family needs to coordinate the particulars with each of these groups.

The Pastor of the venue associated with the deceased person will plan and officiate most funerals. If this Pastor is unavailable, the Associate Pastor will plan and officiate. The Associate Pastor will assist the Senior Pastor with funerals for church members, if available. The Pastor of the venue associated with the deceased person should be contacted in regard to planning the funeral service. In planning the service, efforts are made not to deviate much from the order of service, unless a family member has a special request that can be accommodated easily. The Music Director approves all music to be used in the service. The Music Director should be contacted for musical requests. The music used in the service is expected to be sacred in nature. Exceptions may be made based on the Music Director's approval. Guest musicians are invited to provide piano accompaniment or solos. In order to preserve the instrument, guest musicians are not permitted to play the organ. The Music Director will coordinate with the Organist, guest musicians, soloists, choirs, bands, as well as the sound or multi-media technicians.

The Head of the Caring and Sharing Committee should be contacted if there is to be a meal in the home.

The Office Administrator should be contacted for people wishing to commit the remains of their loved one to our Columbarium.

If there is a death among the African Ministry venue, the African Ministry pastor should be contacted concerning arrangements for the funeral.

If there is a death among the Latino Ministry venue, the Latino Ministry pastor should be contacted concerning arrangements for the funeral.
