Reflection on the Visitation of Mary

The account of the visitation to Elizabeth by the Blessed Virgin Mary is a well-known story that could easily be described as one of the best-loved stories in the bible. If for nothing at all, we are reminded of this event practically every time we sing or recite the Magnificat, the same song Mary sang when she visited her cousin, Elizabeth. Besides, we are offered the opportunity to reflect on the account every time we pray the Joyful Mysteries of the Holy Rosary. There is one aspect of the visitation that I find particularly relevant to us on this occasion. It is a trait that seems to unite the two women in the account. The first to speak, Elizabeth, filled with the Holy Spirit, cries out in a loud voice and utters the prophetic words: "Blessed are you among women and blessed is the fruit of your womb" -Lk 1: 42. The other, Mary, responds to this word of prophecy in her song saying: "All generations will call me blessed"-Lk 1 : 48. So why does Luke at the beginning of his Gospel present us with this story and what is the point of their prophetic utterances?

A closer reading of the Gospel of Luke chapters 1 & 2 clearly indicates that the evangelist took the question of prophetic utterance seriously. Zechariah prophesies when his tongue is loosened -Lk 1: 68-79. Simeon prophesies-Lk 2: 34-35, and so does the prophetess Anna -Lk 2 : 38. However, one thing unites these three – all of them in one way or the other are connected to the temple. Zechariah was a priest (Lk 1: 5); Simeon was in the temple- Lk 2:27; Anna never left the temple- Lk 2: 37. The place of prophecy of Mary and Elizabeth is however quite different. It is in the home of Zechariah and Elizabeth out in the Judean countryside.

Why is this significant? It seems to be the beginning of a series of events that happen in Luke's Gospel and in the life of the early church. The Pentecost event takes place not in the temple but in the upper room, a private household. The preaching of the faith to the gentiles begins in the household of Cornelius (Acts 10) in Joppa. And when Paul arrives for the first time in Europe, it is in the house of Lydia that the first church would gather (Acts 16: 14-16). It would seem that Mary and Elizabeth, in Luke 1, have set in motion an irresistible chain of events, a firm paradigm of the proclamation of the word in the early church, which finds its matrix in the home.

"Mary, Virgin and Mother, you who, moved by the Holy Spirit, welcomed the word of life in the depths of your humble faith as you gave yourself completely to the Eternal One. Help us to say our own 'yes' to the urgent call, as pressing as ever to proclaim the good news of Jesus." (The Joy of the Gospel No. 288)

Amen

MEMORIAL DAY POEM

Most of us play, our lives
Like a game
Both ends of our candle, consumed by the flame
Choosing a curtain,
buying a vowel
Planning tomorrow,
forsaking the now
In days gone by, not so long ago
We were dreaming of spring, through icy windows
Fields of green clover, budding trees and daffodils
Cooling homemade cobblers, on open window sills
Walking barefoot in the yard, after warm morning showers
Lost in our daydreams of sweet smelling flowers

Now June awaits, with anticipating brides
Spring has sprung, as we hear distant tides
Our minds look ahead, to tropical destinations
Free time with loved ones, on family vacations

Camping, hiking, perhaps water skiing
Traveling far away, for some casual sight seeing While we're relaxing, with minds elsewhere
Spending today, on tomorrow's big dare
In the hot summer sun, we'll think of the snow
Taking for granted, the time that we blow

For Americans, tomorrow is Memorial Day
Religious or not, we should all stop and pray
For all the people, who gave their lives
At home and abroad, for their sacrifice
Fighting and dying, for the time that we waste
Ask God to love them and show them His grace
Pray for their families, for the love they lost
Paying the price, with the ultimate cost
Think of the fallen, lost in their prime
Be thankful for them and keep them in mind

-an original poem by Daniel Turner
