3 STEPS TO CHOOSING THE RIGHT CAN LINER

STEP 1 >> DETERMINE THE PROPER CAN LINER TYPE.

There are two types of resins commonly used in the manufacture of can liners: Linear Low and High Density. To decide which one you need, answer this question: "Are sharp objects, being thrown away?"

If yes, you need Linear Low.
If no, you need High Density.

Now that you have decided which resin type is for you, you've eliminated half the products in the brochure. Next, we'll narrow it down even further.

STEP 2 >> WHAT SIZE CONTAINER DOES THE LINER NEED TO FIT?

Ideally, you should have about three to four inches of overhang on the trash receptacles. Anything more or less is wasteful of both time and money.

The following are some guidelines to use when choosing the right size can liner.

A. The gallon capacity or the size is usually printed on the container.

B. Use the product specification charts or the "Measuring for Correct Liner Size" formulas to determine the correct size.

STEP 3 >> HOW MUCH DOES THE LINER NEED TO HOLD?

Here is where you may need to do a little calculating. You need to determine the weight of a full can liner in your environment.

CAN LINER SIZING GUIDE

Why Gauge Isn't Always Important.

Film thickness is no longer a satisfactory standard for judging overall strength. The development of improved LLDPE resin in the liner industry has completely changed the standard method for selecting the correct can liners. These materials have allowed manufacturers to produce thinner, lighter trash bags which are stronger and more durable than the thicker bags previously made from low density resins. This is why gauge is no longer an effective way to determine liner strength. Instead of stating actual thickness, it is now generally accepted to use terminology such as "Light", "Medium", "Heavy" and "Extra Heavy". (See comparison table.)

General Industry Linear Low Density Old Low Density Strength Rating MIL Thickness Range Strength Rating

Light (L)	.35 to .50	1.25
Medium (M)	.45 to .75	1.5
Heavy (H)	.60 to 1.0	2.0
Heavy Plus (H+)	.74 to 1.3	2.5
Extra Heavy (XH)	.90 to 1.5	3.0
Extra Extra Heavy (XXH)	1.3 to 2.0	4.0

Each manufacturer has its own blend formulations, so the proportions of these materials vary from one producer to another. The best way to determine the correct liner is to actually test some suggested samples.

Definitions:

It's important to know a little bit about what can liners are actually made of, and how thicknesses are measured. That way, you can determine which of the polyethylene resins and liner gauges will work best for your particular application.

Resin - The basic raw material from which can liners are made. There are three types of resins: Low Density, Linear Low Density and High Density Polyethylene.

Linear Low Density Polyethylene - This resin is highly puncture and tear resistant. These properties make this the best choice for applications where additional strength and stretch are required. Works well for waste with sharp or jagged edges.

High Density Polyethylene - Liners made from this resin are generally available in lower gauges and are more temperature resistant.

Low Density Polyethylene - This is an older resin still used mainly in lower end liners. It has largely been replaced by Linear Low Density Polyethylene.

Post-Consumer and Post-Industrial Polyethylene - This is made from recycled post-consumer plastics, such as milk jugs and industrial scraps. These are reprocessed and blended with other types of resins.

Gauge - A term used to describe the thickness of a liner. Linear Low Density liners are measured in MILs, while High Density liners are generally measured in microns.

MIL - Measurement based on thousandths of an inch (.000). Common Linear Low Density liners range from .35 to 2.0 MIL in thickness.

Micron - Based on one-hundred thousandths of an inch (.000000). High Density liners usually range from 6 to 24 microns in thickness.

Divide the micron by 25.4 to arrive at true MIL thickness.

How to Convert MILs to Microns

Multiply the MIL by 25.4 to arrive at true micron thickness.

How to Figure Case Weights

Linear Low
Length x Width x MIL, 15=
lbs./1000 bags

High Density
Length x Width x MIL, 15=
lbs./1000 bags

MEASURING FOR CORRECT LINER SIZE

Bag Width:
Use 1/2 of the outer circumference of the container.

Bag Length:
The height of the container, plus 1/2 of the diameter of the container bottom, plus 3" (for overhang). For square or rectangular containers, use the diagonal of the container bottom rather than the diameter.
