Do You Trust Jesus?

In this week's Gospel Reading, Jesus invites the woman at the well into a relationship of trust. He is a Jew—the sort of person she expects to look down on her because she is a Samaritan. What's more, he knows about her past. She has been through marital struggles: five husbands and now living with a man who isn't her husband. And again, she must be regarded very poorly by her townspeople: she, a woman, comes to draw water from the well alone, at midday! (In the ancient Near East, women usually went to the well in groups, in the cool of the morning or toward evening.)

This mysterious Jew, however, doesn't make fun of her lonely midday errand, nor does he mock her for her tumultuous past: he invites her into a conversation that unfolds into him offering to give her living water so she will thirst no more.

Jesus does not come into our lives to condemn us (Jn 3:17), rather He comes to offer us a true friendship (Jn 15:15) and new life (Jn 10:10). He comes to enter into a relationship with us. This relationship must begin with trust. Often, we are like the woman at the well, carrying within our hearts a history of sins of which we are ashamed, a past of many disappointments and wrongs done to us, a bitterness of things that didn't work out, and a fear of the uncertainty of what lies ahead of us. The result is that we build walls and defenses to protect our hearts from being broken again; we make our own plans, so we don't get disappointed again.

We can trust Jesus. We can surrender our past to his mercy, knowing that He has forgiven us, and will heal all our wounds. We can surrender our future, our plans, our dreams, and our worries to Him, because He knows what is best for us, cares for us (1 Pt 5:7) and can accomplish far more for us than we could ever dream or imagine (Eph 3:20). He can love us like we are meant to be loved. We can hope in Him, and we know that this "hope does not disappoint us" (Rom 5:5).

Please pray for our Home-bound and Sick

Father of goodness and love, Hear our prayers for the sick members of our community and for all who are in need.
