After immigrating to Canada with her parents in 1892, she returned to Paris from 1905 to 1907 to study music at the University of Paris. Prior to and after her studies, she had a music studio in Winnipeg where she taught piano and played at various receptions in the city. She was a very talented musician and highly respected in the Winnipeg music circle. She loved to travel and went back to her beloved France numerous times for pleasure and also to visit her mother Léopoldine who had moved back to France & Switzerland in 1925 after the death of her husband Fortuné Mollet. In her Memoires, she wrote about her dreams of the future. "I close my eyes and I try to see myself in a few years from now living in Paris in a nice little apartment. The bell rings, a nice little colony of musicians from Winnipeg, old dear friends and acquaintances have crossed the ocean to breathe for a few months the wonderfully gay and artistic musical atmosphere of Paris! Will this dream ever come true? The future will only tell". Unfortunately, she died of a sudden heart attack on Sept 2nd, 1931 at the age of 56. Her sudden death was covered on the front pages of the Winnipeg newspapers as "one of the most highly esteemed and capable teachers of piano in Winnipeg." Gabrielle never married. For a detailed story of her life, refer to the family book called "An Incredible Journey-The Mollet and Benoit Family Tree."
