How we adjusted with the weather for a client

By Lens Legacy Photography and Videography LLC

The Brief

We had planned a shoot about 14 days in advance, that morning we learned that it was going to be raining during the shoot. The humidity was high causing the lens to fog over. We asked if she had other places in mind, that weren't over water steaming the lens. She was able to find another location and the next day we went back to the original location and got more photos on top of the bonus location.

"Photography is a gateway to unspoken, unseen, and forgotten memories."

Client poses for her photo shoot, looking confident, relaxed, and most importantly beautiful.

The Process

Our Approach

Chronicle the steps you undertook to tackle the challenge.

1. Asked the client if she would like to switch to a separate location due to weather
2. Kept a calm demeanor, and didn't let the rain make us cancel our shoot

Our Solution

Then, describe how it addressed your client's goals.

Goal	Solution	Impact
Client wanted fun, cute, but professional photos taken in a nature seating, she wanted some over a bridge on a body of water, and some in a grassy field.	We decided to go to her second spot first so that way we didn't mess out on a day of shooting	We were still able to capture the essence and the enviroment for both locations. It took an extra day, but client was happy with outcomes.
