Please treat your new surface with respect and be aware of the potential damage that may be caused, taking appropriate preventative measures.

The most common types of damage to newly laid surfaces are:

Damage from stationary or slow moving vehicles

Always ensure that the vehicle is moving before turning its wheels and take care when making tight turns.

Point loading from heavy objects.

Protect the surface with boards when using ladders, skips etc. to ensure the weight of the load is spread.

Contamination.

Do not place dirty or oil-based products directly onto the surface, use boards to protect from staining and marking.

Please remember that footpaths and domestic driveways are usually designed for use by foot traffic and cars; structural damage may occur if heavy vehicles are allowed to use these areas.
