Easter IV April 26, 2026

Christ is Risen! He is Risen Indeed! Alleluia!

Prayer of the Day

O God our shepherd, you know your sheep by name and lead us to safety through the valleys of death. Guide us by your voice, that we may walk in certainty and security to the joyous feast prepared in your house, through Jesus Christ, our Savior and Lord, who lives and reigns with you and the Holy Spirit, one God, now and forever. Amen

The Holy Gospel: John 10:1-10

The Holy Gospel according to John.

Glory to you O Lord.

Jesus said, "Very truly, I tell you, anyone who does not enter the sheepfold by the gate but climbs in by another way is a thief and a bandit. The one who enters by the gate is the shepherd of the sheep. The gatekeeper opens the gate for him, and the sheep hear his voice. He calls his own sheep by name and leads them out. When he has brought out all his own, he goes ahead of them, and the sheep follow him because they know his voice. They will not follow a stranger, but they will run from him because they do not know the voice of strangers." Jesus used this figure of speech with them, but they did not understand what he was saying to them. So again Jesus said to them, "Very truly, I tell you, I am the gate for the sheep. All who came before me are thieves and bandits; but the sheep did not listen to them. I am the gate. Whoever enters by me will be saved, and will come in and go out and find pasture. The thief comes only to steal and kill and destroy. I came that they may have life, and have it abundantly.

The Gospel of the Lord

Praise to you O Christ.

Homily – Rev. Steve Johnston

Do you have a favourite bible text? (Ask people to call out)

Have you picked scripture that you would like for your own funeral?

And have you told anybody about it?

Is there a scripture passage you would love to hear a sermon on?

Those would all be very personal choices

However, for most regular Sunday worship we use a set list of scripture passages called The Revised Common Lectionary (RCL – for short).

It was created by a partnership of liturgical scholars with representatives from Protestant and Catholic churches in the United States and Canada in 1992, and was designed to foster unity among dominations.

It was a revision the 1983 Common Lectionary.

And was also based on feedback after a nine-year trial period.

So our Revised Common Lectionary

is a tried and tested list of scripture passages for Christian worship around the world.

But why should we have a lectionary?

The most important reason is to ensure a balanced, comprehensive diet of scripture that forces the church to engage with the whole of God's message and teachings, rather than relying on a pastor's personal preferences or only just using familiar passages.

It is a structured three-year cycle that guides congregations through the entire narrative of salvation

from Creation to Redemption rather than cherry-picking verses.

The cycle has the years A, B and C.

We are currently in Year A which started with Advent in 2025.

The lectionary also creates unity in a catholic way – that is with a small “c” -

by having diverse congregations worldwide hear and reflect on the same biblical texts on the same day, connecting local worship to the universal Church.

The lectionary is also Christ-Centered Focus

by being structured around the liturgical year starting in Advent, then through Christmas, Lent, Easter, and long season of Ordinary Time,
each with their own liturgical colour.

This ensures that preaching and prayers are consistently centered on the life, death, and resurrection of Jesus Christ.

The lectionary can help in biblical education as it takes parishioners through the core and essential texts of the Christian faith.

In case you wondered, we don't read the entire Bible in Sunday worship.
Today's sermon is an exploration of the Book of Acts text we just heard.

The scripture is pretty short for a Sunday worship – that's a good thing, right?

But it isn't the shortest:

Psalm 117 has 31 words – and is the complete psalm.

We last read this in August 2025 which was Year C in the three-year cycle.

It contains this beautiful sentence:

For great is his steadfast love towards us, and the faithfulness of the Lord endures for ever.

Genesis 12:1–4a has 102 words and our Sunday worship would be deprived if we never heard these words at a service:

I will make of you a great nation, and I will bless you, and make your name great, so that you will be a blessing.

And of course, without Luke 23:44–49 with its 116 words,

Holy Week would feel empty if these words were not spoken:

It was now about noon,
and darkness came over the whole land until three in the afternoon.

So short readings in the lectionary are certainly NOT any lesser in importance than the longer ones.

Today's reading is from the book of Acts chapter 2 only has 111 words.

But try to think of missing this story about the beginnings of our Christian Church.

What would our Sundays be like without prayer and the breaking of the bread.

Our scripture today is the tail end of Book of Acts chapter 2 which contains Peter's speech, or rather, his sermon, to his fellow Jews and the residents of Jerusalem.

Acts 2 starts with the day of Pentecost story, you know the one:

when that sound like that of a violent rushing wind came from heaven, with tongues like flames of fire and the disciples began to speak in different tongues and the crowd was confused because each person heard them speaking in their own language.

The preceding verse 41, just before our reading today reads,

“So those who accepted Peter’s message were baptized, and that day about three thousand people were added to them.
And continuing in verse 42, “they devoted themselves to the apostles’ teaching and fellowship, to the breaking of bread and the prayers.”

The breaking of the bread is such a significant part of who Jesus is to us, and also, a significant part our understanding of God’s actions of salvation through Jesus.

When I teach confirmation students and we talk about the story of the Passover,
I tell them that this is a “freedom” meal.

It is the meal connected to the tenth and final plague against the Egyptians and Pharaoh, and is when God sends the angel of death to kill all the first born sons of each family, animal and human, however, if the home has been marked with the blood of the sacrificed lamb,
the angel will PASS-OVER that house.

The Passover meal of the lamb is then to be eaten in a hurry,
then the family are to flee.

So, this is the initial liturgical act marking the escape of the Hebrew people from slavery.
It is a freedom meal.

Cast your mind back to Holy Week, and on the Thursday of every Holy Week, Christians gather on Maundy Thursday evening to tell the story of Jesus hosting a Passover meal with his disciples.

In THAT Passover meal, Jesus broke bread and shared it, and he also picked up the third of four cups of wine,
the Cup of Redemption
and said the HIS blood was the new covenant.

This Passover with Jesus is his Last supper, is marking both the Hebrew's freedom from slavery in 1313 BCE,
and now he has added new meaning through himself,
marking freedom from sin.

The following day – Good Friday in our calendars – Jesus is hung on the cross.

On that first Easter Sunday

Jesus appears to two of the disciples as they walked to Emmaus, but they don't realize that it was Jesus.

As night falls, he goes into a house with them, and he took the bread, blessed and broke it, and gave it to them.

Then their eyes were opened – they recognised Jesus.

Our story today takes place on Pentecost

– which is about 50 days after Jesus' resurrection and about 10 days after his ascension.

And they are already breaking bread together as a regular connection to the risen Jesus.

And we do that very thing every time we take Holy communion.

This is a long-standing tradition and a mark of being Christian.

We have been participating in this bonding and communion with Jesus for almost 2000 years.

It is such a blessing

– and lets us participate in a physical way
in God's act of salvation for God's people.

Do you have a story about taking communion?

When was your first time?

I can tell you mine.

I was living in Belfast in Northern Ireland.

My Dad was one of the elders at our local Presbyterian Church.

Once a month, there was (at least to my 11 year old mind)

a holy huddle up at the front of the church as they took Communion.

At Sunday lunch one time, I asked my Dad,

“When can I take Communion”,

and he said, “When the session thinks you are ready.”

The session is like the council of elders.

I didn’t maintain my church attendance back then – mostly because the people outside were killing each other,

sort of, in the name of Jesus

– meaning the Protestants and Catholic terrorists

in the 1970’s

whilst the preacher spoke of the Jesus of love and forgiveness.

It didn’t make sense to 11-year-old me.

Eventually I moved to Canada in 1990, and in 1996 I met a woman whose parents were German.

I started to attend St. Ansgar Lutheran Church in Toronto.

That is when I first took my first communion aged 36.

We married in that church the next year.

Four years after that, I started seminary in Waterloo, Ontario.

That is the same freedom meal that we all get to share.

As pastor for almost 20 years I have many precious stories of celebrating the breaking of bread:

– by campfires with confirmation students or camp councillors,

– or the time a couple was having a very private marriage in the church, and before the marriage, and with his adult children present,

we took communion together as a physical reminder of the proclamation of forgiveness of sins.

That wasn’t a judgement of his previous marriage,

but no matter what had happened then,

it had failed and there was brokenness.

Now with forgiveness declared,

the new couple could make a clean start.

We continued and the couple were married.

- or the many times with a family at the bedside of a dying parent, when we held hands in a circle saying the Lord's Prayer and sharing a last supper with the parent.

A few years ago, I heard an Anglican bishop making a statement about the decline of church attendance.

He said, "even if our buildings close,
all we need is a bible
and place to stand and we can continue"

I think he missed two things;

all we need is place to meet with bread and wine
and then a Bible to read.

As we look at our scripture in Acts chapter 2
the scriptures had not been written down yet.

So the words I just read to you from the Book of Acts, hadn't been written down as yet. That happen at least another 20 years, and probably more like 30 or 40 years later.

Meanwhile, "the people of that time devoted themselves to the apostles' teaching and fellowship, to the breaking of bread and the prayers."

So the next time you come forward to break bread and share wine, remember Jesus is still ever present every time in every morsel of bread and in every sip from the cup of redemption, and we have been doing this as Christan's for 2000 years.

This act of communion is timeless, and endless.

Thanks be to God.

Amen.

Lord's Prayer

Our Father, who art in heaven, hallowed be thy name, thy kingdom come, thy will be done, on earth as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread; and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us; and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

Benediction

The Lord bless you and keep you,
The Lord's face shine upon you and be gracious unto you,
The Lord look upon you with favour and give you (+) peace. Amen.

Dismissal

Go in peace. In Christ you are made new. Alleluia! Alleluia!

Thanks be to God. Alleluia! Alleluia!
