HYALURONIC ACID

Live a healthier lifestyle.

HYALURONIC ACID, also known as hyaluronan or hyaluronate, is a hydrophilic (water-loving) carbohydrate found naturally throughout the human body. First isolated by Karl Meyer in 1934, HA is comprised of the molecules N-acetyl glucosamine and glucuronic acid. Its linear, rope-like structure allows it to bind up to 1,000 times its weight in water. As HA seeks out and binds to water, it becomes a viscous, Jell-O-like substance that serves as the body's natural lubricant and provider of cushioning and elasticity.

Hyaluronic Acid is found in our bodies' connective tissues (tendons, ligaments, cartilage, skin, ground substance/matrix or extra cellular matrix fluid) and synovial fluid between the joints and eyes.

FIVE PILLARS OF HYDRATION

Full Body Support

Hyaluronic Acid plays a critical role in healthy movement throughout our lifetime.

As we grow older, discomfort begins and the joints experience limitations in movement. Maintaining healthy levels of Hyaluronic Acid in our joints and bodies is one way to ensure healthy joints and flexibility as we age.

HIGH MOLECULAR WEIGHT

Hyalock Technology

LMW Hyaluronic Acid does not typically have the surface area for binding to water and thus proper lubrication is harder to achieve. HMW Hyaluronic Acid typically weighs up to 5 times that of LMW Hyaluronic Acid –a significant difference. LMW Hyaluronic Acid in the body is generally compromised and is not as successful at providing cushion, hydration and transfer of nutrients.

HYALOCK™

Proven by Research

According to research, purified, high molecular weight, non-animal (vegan) HA may work best because it closely resembles the substance found in the body. This type of HA is derived from an extracellular protein during a natural fermentation process. This type of HMW HA has powerful anti-aging and lubricating properties.

Make the Right Choice

When shopping for HA either as a dietary supplement or a topical, be sure to choose animal-free, HMW HA. Natural Fermentation is the most common non-animal source of Hyaluronic Acid. It's non-GMO and vegan friendly.
