THE SEALEY BUYING GUIDE TO BATTERY CHARGERS

View our current range of Battery Chargers here:

What type of charger do I need?

MANUAL CHARGERS

Traditional chargers are manually operated. The user must decide the level of charge to be applied, monitor the charge status regularly and turn off the charger when the battery is fully charged. Failure to turn off the charger when the battery is fully charged, could result in permanent damage to the battery.

AUTOMATIC CHARGERS

These are often called Smart Chargers or Intelligent Chargers and utilise electronic circuitry and microchips that automatically assess the condition of a battery. They apply the ideal level of charge to optimise the charging procedure, resulting in a faster, more efficient charge. When the battery is fully charged, they revert to a maintenance mode, keeping the battery in a fully charged state. Therefore, there is no risk of damage to your battery. In maintenance mode the charger will continually monitor and charge the battery as required over extended periods of time.

Conventional or Maintenance?

You need to decide on which type of charger best suits your requirements. There are two types of charging function:

CONVENTIONAL CHARGING

These chargers have the ability to charge a battery from low voltage to fully charged. This can take anything from 6 to 24 hours, depending on the level of discharge.

MAINTENANCE & TRICKLE CHARGING

Trickle Chargers employ the use of electronic battery monitoring to regulate charging rate. This prevents overcharging, charging your vehicle's battery at a rate similar to that at which it self-discharges, so as to maintain full battery capacity. These tend to be low amperage units (1-2A). Charging at too fast a rate, or overcharging can cause damage to the battery.

This function is typically used to keep a battery fully charged while in storage over long periods and is very popular for classic cars, or vehicles that are only used occasionally.

Additional Functions

ENGINE STARTER FUNCTION

This function is typically found on larger, heavy-duty chargers and provides a high amp boost, which allows you to jump-start a vehicle with a discharged battery. They work by transferring power directly from the internal transformer to a vehicle's discharged battery. The jump starter function will not charge your battery, but instead provide the necessary power to crank the engine and start the vehicle. Once the engine is on, the alternator will charge the battery. The biggest advantage of portable jump starters is that they do not require the assistance of another vehicle or person.

DESULPHATION FUNCTION

Some chargers also include a desulphation function. Sulphation occurs naturally in batteries. Over time it builds up on the batteries internal lead plates, reducing their efficiency and the lifespan of the battery. The desulphation function creates a pulsed charge, which cleans off the sulphation. Vehicles that utilise "Start Stop" technology may require Smart Chargers to charge their batteries. Always refer to manufacturers specific information prior to charging.

POINTS TO CONSIDER

Now you've decided on the type of charger you need, there are a couple more points to consider: Bigger batteries require larger output chargers. Therefore, you will need to choose a charger capable of charging the largest battery you are likely to need to charge. Most chargers are suitable for charging Lead Acid Batteries. But not all are suitable for Gel, Calcium or AGM, EFB or lithium batteries. Always refer to the battery manufacturer for specific charging instructions.

The fuel is more completely burned and does not leave an oily residue as experienced with paraffin heaters. There is no odour, except for the few seconds during start-up and the units run a little more quietly, since they do not need a compressor to drive the fuel to the burner. Heaters are fan assisted, fitted with a piezoelectric ignition system for trouble-free starting and feature a direct gas head assembly. Safety solenoids prevent the heaters from leaking gas without first being electrically started. Supplied with an approved propane gas regulator and hose. All models are tested and certified to CE/EN standards. Manufactured to BS EN 1596.
